This comment by Mark on the Dusty word association thread is the inspiration for this thread. He wrote:

Hmmmmmm... I have such mixed emotions about Dusty - didn't think about her for years until I Googled her last year and found my way to DSC(YIKES!!!🙄). Since then, ol' Dust has brought so many good things(great people) and not-so-good things(well, I needn't go into that, Kids🙄) into my life that it feels like old times🙄 - Ambivalence thy name is "RosieLee"🙄

If at first you don't succeed, give up.

Warning - 'poor me' post ahead

My thoughts about Dusty today.....

I must have a good idea JUST how she felt when it all went horribly wrong!
I'm having a BAD day creatively. Actually I've had a bad MONTH come to think of it!

I have the following negative character attributes in common -to a certain extent- with Dusty...

Laziness, a serious allergy to boredom, perpetual restlessness, an obsessive/addictive personality, serious self doubt, crazy mood swings & depression. To name but a few.

And my middle name is Bernadette

(yeah, alright I made that up)

Sadly I'm lacking her artistic genius to compensate! But then I don't throw things either...

Fortunately age teaches us not to take ourselves TOO seriously!

Thanks Nancy! 😊.....I tend to think of Dusty songs 'tween' drops at Work, meaning once I've delivered whatever to one address, I'll get back in the Van and have a particular Dusty song in my head for the next few minutes until I arrive at the next address.....at the moment it's 'Go easy on me', last month it was 'I just fall in love again', and 'Where is a woman to go' (I love KT's backing vocal on that one!), and so on.

Also, as Tim says, we all have so much in common with Dusty, the little things more than anything, such as lookin' at Planes in the Sky in wishin' I was on it, conversant with maps and wanting to know which places I'm travellin' through, and many more psychological attributes and day to day things that we can relate to with Dusty.....and as Nancy says, that's ultimately the reason we're all here!

Oh I don't think so Nancy.....after all Dusty was a fan of many artistes and genres "I have a very eclectic taste in music".....Jo Stafford, Nina Simone, the whole Motown ensemble, and many, many others.....so I'm sure Dusty wouldn't mind you listenin' to somebody else!

I doubt very much if Dusty was as small minded as that, you know. The two of them may well have had big differences but they both acknowledged eachothers skills as singers/performers.

What happens to me is that I connect so much of what I see and hear each day to Dusty. I know it's not just me as my friend Michael used to do exactly the same thing, that's how we knew we were on the same planet 😊
People say things and I think "Dusty said that", I hear a song on the radio and I imagine how she could have sung it. A place gets mentioned, like London, Amsterdam, LA, Rome or even Blackpool and I think of how they're connected to Dusty. It's almost like the six degrees of separation thing, I can do it with almost anything. I can connect almost any 'celeb' in the music business in one way or another, I don't do it consciously, it just happens. And yes, I probably am mad 😊

A lot of my everyday thoughts as I'm drivin' around are 'wishful thinking' ones, like wishing Dusty was still with us, it wouldn't matter that Dusty was no longer recording or making public appearances, I would be more than content (as I know most of us would) that Dusty was simply there in retirement in Henley and having trips with Simon to nearby Heathrow Airport to watch the Planes and just generally taking it easy and knowing she was content in her own way.....I would find that fact very comforting....

These are lovely, thank you. Mark, I too get very sad sometimes that she is gone. My friend teases me that I "pray" to her at an "altar" but it's more of a memorial place, where I light the candles just to pay respect and remembrance to her.

And Carole, I drive certain people crazy by doing things like that! I guess I'll have to do more of it on this site. LOL.

I'll share more of my Dusty thoughts later....in the meantime, do others have others, general or specific.

Bless Dusty.

That's really sweet of you Nancy, I always light a candle for Dusty (along with my late parents) whenever I happen to be visiting a Church or Cathedral, it's the very least I can do for all the years of listening pleasure she's given to everyone.
Dusty's rose which has pride of place in the garden is like a 'shrine' to me, we've had the best of the bloom for this year, but I'm sure it will bud lovely next Spring!

I sometimes think this too... not in a bad way as if Dusty is selfish and narrow minded but i feel bad if i listen to something else sometimes. And if i skip a song on a CD i feel bad because i wonder if she thinks i don't like it or it isn't as good as the others. But i know she doesn't mind, i just sometimes think she does!

When I hear a song I think don't shut that off, because I was alittle mad at her, I'm being rude. The songs always keep on going. There is a song coming right on up Clare. She is a very understanding person. Thats why I love her. Teda.

with fear of sounding slightly obsessed with the girl, here goes 😬

i started the day by listening to Dusty on my iPod 😊 i've been listening to her a lot, today - mostly some songs from "The Look Of Love" compilation.

and i've been thinking all day about how i love & miss Dusty - but i always think about that 🤔 i just wish she were still with us; i hope she knows that there are still a lot of people who adore her.

i've also been thinking a lot about you fans, over the past few days - you're like family to me; i'm so glad Dusty brought us all together 🍀

oh, and i've been thinking about getting a Dusty t-shirt made - you see those stalls sometimes, where they can print words onto t-shirts for you, and i'd quite like something Dusty related! 😊 i'll have to start a new thread so that people can suggest what should be printed on it.

Well, it's our busiest time of year at work, but I still think of Dusty everyday (and always will, for the rest of my life!), my Dusty moments today and yesterday as I've been doing my rounds were looking at the Planes criss-crossing up in the bright blue sky, (for November, the weather's been glorious!) wishing I was on it, wherever it may going, and I've read Dusty was like that about Aeroplanes too, then I've thought it would be nice to be sitting at the bar in the First-class cabin along with Dusty, sippin' Cocktails and singin' whatever songs came into our heads, even the old Cockney ones (I'm proud of my Cockney heritage!) such as 'My old man', 'On Mother Kelley's doorstep', and 'Let's all go down the Strand ('ave a banana!).

I'm sure Dusty would have been fluent with the lyrics to all of 'em!

Mark I'll hope you'll teach me some next time we meet!

Last night I had many thoughts of Dusty as Mary and Paula and I watched clips. Mostly I thought of how cute and funny she was. And iconic. An overused word. But Dusty defines it. The look. The voice. Unmistakable. Remarkable. Singular. Divine.

That's interesting, Clare, because I once ran a red light because I was so enraptured with a Dusty song!

(Can I blame that speeding ticket on Dusty too? 🤪)

Last night when I had guest and students over I had four candles burning on the Dusty shrine. So, I kind of felt she was looking over me and telling me it was okay to take a break, and I could get back to writing about her when they went home. 😊

About 4 years ago I was driving in the centre of Manchester and listening to a tape I'd been sent of Dusty being interviewed, I think it was a Dinah Shore Show. Anyway she was talking about the drink and drugs and being more open than usual, at which point I realised that I'd driven into a one way street that had cars coming at me in two lanes. I'd never been so scared 😱

Aw Carole you made me laugh! .. Tho that'd be quiet scarey!

Apart from the already mentioned- missing her.

Everytime I get a phone call or txt on my mobile i think of Dusty, because both are Dusty sounds. My ringtone is a song and my msg tone is from that short chat interview with her and Spencer Davis, it goes " Did he do it, "keep on running (singing)..Did he write it like that". I love it. Haha startled the lady at the checkout today cos I had my phone turned up really loud. Hearing Dusty makes me smile & happy.

oOo & today, I wonder what the policeman thought of Dusty. I was caught in roadworks & we crawled for a long stretch of road. Driving extremely slow (music up, window down), I kind of got into "I only want to be with you" and doing a little dance and singing whilst driving sloooooow. Turn next to the car next to me..and there two policemen watching me...

My gay friend Brian had an obsession with a 60s B movie actress. He procured her address, wrote her fan mail, organized a movie festival in a gay bar in Greenwich Village. He was smitten.

Then he moved to L.A. and met her. Now they're best buddies, eating dinner together almost nightly.

Agnetha of ABBA had an overweight, pimply teenager stalker. I do recall a TV interview with both of them holding hands - apparently they were now living together.

So you can get your object of fantasy if you try hard enough. But Dusty's dead. Sometimes I think I'm going insane, admiring the talents of dead people. It can't be healthy. A living artist would be an improvement.

On the other hand I've heard gay boys go on for hours about Judy Garland, dissecting every scandalous detail with love.

I can't listen to that much Dusty, as some of you do. It's like the Beatles - once you've had your fill, you can return only occasionally. I'm on my Joan Baez phase now - another great singer with perfect pitch and sublime musical taste doing good work through the 70s and 80s, but nobody paid attention.

But I do enjoy handing out compilation CDs I made of Dusty to friends and have them say "I had no idea she was this good".

If I think of Dusty, I think, why did England's greatest singer stop in 1969? Petula's not nearly as talented, yet she keeps going like the energizer bunny in her seventies.
