They are using some Dusty in the music for He Kills Coppers on ITV1 (UK). Add to that the fact that the main female character bears a resemblance to Dusty..

Bloody cheek! Imagine using a good part of 'If You Go Away" as that stud shoots three policemen dead! My word they played almost the entire song!

And Neil.... mmmm yes I think I have to agree with you :)

Correction, I think it *was* the entire song. Even faded out the programme on the last line, with 'Please don't go away..' played over the blacked out screen. I wonder if we can expect more Dusty as the series goes on? I think we just might.

If definitely was the entire song, finishing with "please don't go away" as the credits rolled. If that doesn't sell some more CD's, I'll be amazed. The whole first episode was building up to that last few minutes and to hear Dusty played so prominently was wonderful. The tears on the girls face coming to the end of the song was perfect too. Nit picking, but being as the event took place in 1966, odd to choose two tracks from 67 and 68! But I'll forgive them 🙄 The other track playing was ICMEACTT.

LOL Well the events may have predated the music, but the music sure did fit the events!

And Neil - its bound to get a repeat showing on ITV2 over the next few days. It was a very powerful scene and worth seeing, and the music most definitely added to that.

Neil, what can I say? I should have warned you, I feel responsible, I knew there was another song coming 🙄 The phone rang here as well but it didn't get answered.

Its ok, im able to cope now. It always happens though, im always missing important things. When we were kids we went on a trip to jodrell bank this huge telescope type thing, and it moves not very often, i was the only one in the whole school that was looking at something else when it happened. Bloody typical.

Im sure tonight the old witch did it on purpose.

Neil, I've just checked the TV listings for the coming week and the good news is that this episode will be repeated on Thursday on ITV1 at 10:35pm. Set your video!!!!

And unplug the phone ;)

Part of a longish review in today's Times.....

Whereas Heartbeat raids Brian Matthews's vinyl collection for tunes that will induce nostalgic complacency, in He Kills Coppers the senseless killing of three policemen was set to Dusty Springfield's haunting If You Go Away. This stunning sequence was a farewell to whatever innocence 1966 retained. "If you go away, as I know you must," sang Dusty, "There'll be nothing left in this world to trust." And, indeed, soon after Harry Roberts had shot two policemen for threatening to nick him for an out-of-date tax disc, there wasn't. "Eee Ay Adio, We Won the (World) Cup" was superseded on the terraces by "Harry Roberts is our friend. He kills coppers".

Good to know this is repeated. Thanks Will for the info. I was torn between watching the Ladies Detective Agency on Sunday night, which had a good write up and heard disussed on the radio too and I also wanted to see the final episode of Willy's Wonky Chocolate factory and missed that too...and now waiting for the repeat. At least I can now watch He Kills Coppers tomorrow night now!

BUMP

The repeat of this is on ITV1 tonight at 10:35pm for anyone who missed it or who was rudely interrupted by phone calls while the original screening was on (yes, thats YOU, Neil lol)..
