Dave I think you've put quite a lot of detail in, on your version of this. I think you have done a fantastic job on the teeth as regards detail and everything, and her mouth, I think on that picture you have just got to pay attention to the mouth and teeth really, because they are the picture. Get that bit wrong and you've had it. The only difference I think is probably not so much detail in the hair, but it's a great job you did on that one Dave. And the other thing to remember is we all have different styles. It's part of our own personality I think.

And Bosseh says the Devil is in the detail.

Hi Mary

Yes I put it on as my screensaver and it is huge, all across the screen and I drew it mostly from the screen because I could see the detail more but I used the print-out as well. But she does fairly jump out of the screen at you.

Thanks Josh, I think this is my favourite of the coloured ones too, cause I'm never really very happy with the coloured ones, but this one I think is better because it is in just one colour. I'll be trying that trick again, it's more satisfying for me I think.

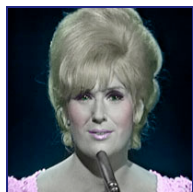

Anyway I've given it pride of place over my computer and taken others down to make room for it, so I must be happier with it.

It's interesting to see the very different styles of Wendy and Dave. As Carole-Trek said, both zero in on Dusty's 60s exuberance.

Wendy, I'm always amazed by what you do with Dusty's hair in your portraits. You really should frame them all and have a gallery showing of all your work in honor of Dusty's 10th anniversary. Blue Dusty is another great one.

I'm dreadfully behind here! Another brilliant and beautiful portrait, Wendeh! I'm running out of adjectives.
Dave, you are catching a lot in your sketches. I especially like your rendering of the image Wendy also drew.

Paula, I look forward to your surprise.

Thanks Annie, I have started to frame one or two of them, but it's a slow process.

Oh Paula, a small project, and you know how excited we get on here about things like projects and DD and all - now I can hardly contain myself.

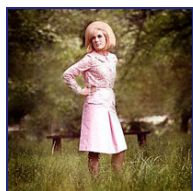

Better not tell Neil, he'll go through the roof.

But you know we're all looking forward to your project now.

Thanks Bosseh.
