A little gem from much later in Dusty's career - sing an early hit on the Aspel Show..

Love that video, Will! Dusty seems to be having so much fun, and it's a fabulous rendition of the song. I love that she isn't afraid to let the backing singers take the credit for their part in the song, and she particularly 'works' the music as well, especially when it goes into the instrumental part. It's such a fun performance!

Love, love, love her outfit too; it's very flattering and Dusty looks fantastic. Her hair looks lovely as well- that particular gold colour really suited her. The interview is really good also. Can you tell I just love the Aspel videos!!

Thanks again Frans for uploading the videos- they're absolutely wonderful. And thanks Will for drawing attention back to this particular one- a gem indeed!

Marty, I wonder if it might have been sometime in early '89? If that's when Nothing Has Been Proved was released... Dusty and Aspel talked about the video for it during the interview.

I'd say that's reasonable guess, Sarah - the clothes alone place it squarely in the eighties and what a fabulous jacket that is.

Doing a little digging, it seems that this was 'Aspel And Company', series 6, episode 13, and it aired on 11th February 1989. The other guests on that show along with Dusty, were Jodie Foster and Austin

Mitchell. Dusty was the last guest to come on.

She did look fabulous on this show, although I seem to remember reading or hearing she wasn't happy with what she was wearing. Also she wasn't too thrilled at being asked to sing an old song but that was what they wanted. I haven't watched the whole show for quite a while now, that's the thing about video's as opposed to dvd's, they gather dust 😊

And of course, the other thing is that it gets increasingly more difficult to find machines on which to play them..

I figured it had to be th late 70s or early 80, can we pin it down better than that?

Thanks!

Will already gave the date Marty, it was February 1989.

Actually she was the first to come on and I remember their was a hoo ha because she wanted to plug "Nothing has been proved" but the TV company insisted she did IOWTBWY. We did see a clip of the video and I remember Dusty interjecting when Jodie Foster was on about what a great actress Jodie was. I felt Jodie was abit distant towards Dusty..felt she was almost trying to hide behind her star persona rather than the real person that (I think) she is Wow - 20 years ago to the day. That doesn't seem right, does it?

Wow, Vicky. Isn't it odd how those dates seem to pop up when you least expect it? I was listening to 'Poor Wayfaring Stranger' a few years ago, and realized it was 40 years to the day since she'd sung it on her TV program. Spooky.

And back on topic, I love this video and the song. It's interesting to see how much her range had changed, and how she graciously defers to her backup singers, knowing that they can hit the higher notes easier than she can. Class act, that woman. I also truly admire her candor and honesty, as well as her speaking voice.

I read an interview at the time this was aired and Dusty said she had a cold and that was why she was having a bit of vocal trouble. She still pulled it off though.

Oh, she did wonderfully as always. I'm sure that rather than put too much strain on her voice when she wasn't feeling well, she let the
