lovely photos, Mark 😊 it's such a pretty rose.

if i'm not mistaken, Rob also took a photo of a Dusty Springfield Rose, and it was beautiful 😊 i think i have it saved on here.. i'll have a look, now.

Mine didn't even bud this year 🙄 I had one of the very first batch and it's never been very healthy, it even usually has two different kinds of flower on it! Don't ask me how.

That's gorgeous Mark, how come my roses are always manky - is it a question of manure?

Not sure to be honest Tim!.....though I know that where I am in South Essex the Earth is clay Earth, when I planted it I added a little compost and feed it with 'toprose'.

Why is Zippy's rose orangish and Mark's pinkish?

Carole, clearly Dusty is playing a trick on you, testing your devotion.

You could be right Nancy and apparently she's doing the same to Pat. She has the two headed rose as well!

That's because she knew you two could take it! LOL.

Does anyone know how those roses that some of us helped plant at Dusty's marker are doing?

I'm not sure why but the colour in Mark's photo is more accurate. Just as in his first photo my buds were reddish.

At the beginning of the growing season my Dusty Rose all but died on me as I had moved it, but it did buck up and had about 4 flowers... then it got, is it black spot or whatever and I'd to spray it and almost lost it again. Now its healthier but has one lone bud on it that refuses to open cos its camera shy!

Something I was wonderin' too Nancy, I know one of the bushes didn't make it and has been removed.....I'm sure Betty and Donna are keepin' an eye on things though.

Simon told me the Dusty roses were rather finicky and that's why he put a different one at Dusty's marker (the one in the pail) and it's thrived all these years.

After all that effort you put into it too, Rob!

But I'll be we could plant more! And we have the funds to do it.

Rob, maybe you could research the best time of year for planting them?
