Another great issue, more new photo's, stunning centrefold and a lovely contemplative shot of Dusty on the cover. Previews of all the books, first part of Fame Has A Flipside Too, the Woman's Own article from '65, all in Dusty's own words, and Goin' Back is 1980 - 1984, again with pics that I haven't seen before. There's also an offer that I hope everyone will take up...the first DSB callendar, with full page photos from all decades. If this is popular, and surely it must be, then there's the possibility that Paul will venture into a coffee table book, and I'm definitely up for that!

I've received mine too, its brilliant but....it got soaked as we have had terrible downpours, and the pages were stuck together, nobodys fault, just one of those things.

I can't believe that I forgot to renew my script after the last Bulletin 😞..sending a check to Paul ASAP!
I would love, love ,love it if Paul H put out an Ear book as I have not been able to get a hold of the Ear book from the last edition of the "Simply ..Dusty" box set.

Paul does place some in HMV in Oxford St but buying from there doesn't give you the opportunity to take up the offers that are available to members.

The new bulletin is way cool. Are we allowed to talk about it, or do we have to wait til the Aussies get their copies?

Let's Talk It Over! I really liked the chapter from the 'compulsive new series' by Dusty herself in the 'Woman's Own' (1965)... 😊

I'll wait for instructions... F.A.B.

Hey Carole 😊

I love that cover picture too. She looks so cool in her cardigan with her dainty cuff links and that satin blouse.

As I was saying, I think the Womans' Own article is the best thing in this month's DSB (I wondered if you or Cas had donated it).

This article, apparently written by Dusty herself, is full of nuggets that, for me, verify so much about Dusty. Her chaotic childhood. Her perfectionism which was to become chronic. Her tremendous drive and focus, trying to prove herself to her parents - that plain little spectacled girl absolutely knew she was going to be a successful singer. That enormous immediate solo success...entering the charts with 'I Only Want To Be With You' at No. 17. As Dusty says this was rare then and particularly for a girl. She doesn't tell anyone, doesn't want to appear to be fishing for compliments or applause. As a little girl she never told anyone it was her birthday in case it looked like she was fishing for a present and consequently she didn't get as many presents as other children.

Dusty describes the downside and the pressure of being so in demand. The intrusive questions 'Have you ever been in love?'. Losing her school friends; Dusty spends some time telling us that she was hurt by their reactions. But when they agreed to meet in 5 years after leaving school Dusty told them she might find that difficult what with all the recordings and rehearsing! And that's exactly what happened. She didn't turn up because she was in Blackpool. They said they didn't turn up either but I wonder...

Then there are memories of Tom saying 'When I grow up I'm going to have my own band' and Dusty replying 'And I'm going to be a blues singer'. Dusty says they had absolutely no contacts at all in the entertainment world - I mean these two are amazing. I'm really intrigued by Dusty and Tom and don't understand why there isn't a book about them both as they were both important forces in British pop music.

Dusty directly links her mother's food throwing to her own crockery smashing episodes - 'it's only my way of releasing the tension' she explains. The funniest bit is Dusty's first night with the Lana sisters with her knee hanging out of a tear in in her 'tight pale blue lame trousers!' She tripped down the stairs probably because she couldn't see her way. And then there's the mention of buying a fabulous silver Italian sports car on 'h.p.' (hire purchase or credit as we call it now). 'Dusty Goes Motorvatin' ' - that's another book I want!

Towards the end of the article she regrets not having a normal teen-age life or going out with boys. But Dusty has already told us she was a geek as a teen-ager, insular and intensely fixated on her singing and music. She was secretly training herself for a long successful career. No-one forced her. She wasn't a Michael Jackson or Donny Osmond. Dusty did everything by herself.

Next month we get to hear about the day Dusty cried in Burt Bacharach's flat and the truth about her "romance" with Eden Kane! Totally Wonderful Stuff!

It is wonderful stuff and I can remember the original series of articles coming out. It was absolutely fascinating to hear Dusty's story from the horses mouth and the pictures were mostly new to us as well. I think Paul did once do photocopies of the original articles in the Bulletin, but they had sellotape marks and weren't easy to read. My copies are the same, as I expect Cas's are. The pictures, at least some of them, were in colour too. I once saw Dusty in a cafe in Manchester and I remembered this article and her saying how everyone was staring at her eating, and I tried so hard not to!

Good to hear that Dusty's anniversary next year won't be forgotten either, with releases from Rhino and Universal. And please, order the calendar if you can because I would love one and if the requisite number of orders isn't reached, it may not see the light of day 😞

Carole!

You saw Dusty in a cafe - well, aren't you going to tell us about it? 😊 Please.

That Woman's Own series is special. One of the new books ought to include it. It's so precious to have Dusty's own words. I read it so eagerly I was finished in no time at all! Then I read it again and found there were even more nuggets!

I wish Paul had used the Bulletin cover pictures for the calendar... but I'll be putting an order in. 😊

At the risk of boring those who I've told before 😊, it was before a show at the Palace Theatre in Manchester and my friend and I had gone into a cafe just up from it. We were sitting at a table when Dusty came in with two guys (can't remember, but pick out of Fred, Vic, Peppi, Doug!) they stood at the counter and Dusty was taking peeks behind her and I thought looked very shy. Someone approached her for an autograph and I was dreading others following, but they didn't. Dusty sat facing a wall and I was in such a dither that I snapped my plastic knife, which made a pretty loud noise making Dusty turn around. That's it really, we sat till they left obviously, you don't leave before royalty 😊

Thanks 😊 I love that story. I like that you were dreading people besieging Dusty (and that you yourself left her alone) and that you snapped your knife! I think I would have too 😊

If there is someone from the UK to whom I can paypal money for the calendar and then they send a cheque to Paul, please drop me an email.

I also note that Paul says depending upon the success of the calendar, he may do a coffee table book !!

Just received my Bulletin as I had to renew my lapsed script. Again, its always so exciting to open that brown envelope and be taken back by yet another beautiful cover. ..not a bad centerfold either. 😊

Looking forward to the rest and will look into the calendar order.
