Did Dusty ever comment on this painting?
I wonder did she pose for the artist John Geary or if he worked from photographs?
If so has anyone seen the photo it might have been based on?

I think it's unflattering. Technically it's very accomplished, but it lacks soul.

I have some interviews on tape from the AVFL time and I think she talked about it on there. When I get a chance, I'll listen again.

In respect to Dusty - can we we move the focus off her illness and back to the topic..

Thanks

In all the interview promotions that Dusty did after AVFL, she spoke of feeling unwell during the recordings and of what subsequently happened. She was very open about it and she also spoke with great eloquence, confidence and humour. I've been listening to some of those interviews over the last couple of days and she never fails to make me smile. She was talking to someone about recording NHPB with the PSB's, what a breathy song it was and how she felt like she needed a bicycle pump wired up intravenously to keep her going!

The face is too round or something.

Does anyone know if Dusty liked it?

I'm still listening to the tapes, on and off, hoping to find the bit where she talks about the cover....I'll get there!

I've just listened to the interview. It was with Simon Bates and I'd say Dusty didn't meet up with the artist as when SB asked her who did the portrait on the cover, she said "beats the heck outta me! Well, whoever it was, he's got it right, except for the mouth, I look like I've got a gum shield in! Actually, it's really got a good impression of.....I believe someone said the word "essence", it does look...it certainly looks like me from there up. I'm now just showing the eyes folks"!

SB - It also looks like you're in ecstasy with your eyes closed.
D - "That could be possible"!

I've said before that I think the expression Dusty has there is just like the end(ish) frame of her on the video of Something In Your Eyes.

Thanks for finding that Carole, Dusty's comment about the gumshield made me smile.
She had such a great sense of humour.

There was another comment from her in the interview that made me laugh and it was when Simon Bates mentioned the big Springfields dresses and she said "the dressmaker was still underneath them"! I have to say that throughout the interviews I listened to from the AVFL time, she was constantly laughing in that throaty way that is so infectious.

Could try the old fashioned way - just putting the computer microphone up to the speakers while you play the tape? Use sound recorder, make a wave file out of it, and then you can download a free program to convert it to an mp3.

Shame we aren't nearer, Carole - because I should be able to do it here.

I run music editing software on my home studio, and have a hifi soundcard with input sockets.

The way it works is that you channel the sound input from the tape/record deck thru an external mixer and then into the soundcards inputs. It's quite expensive to have this set up and so most people don't have it.

Apart from that I don't think there is an easier way other than Mr Cafe's idea.

Carole,

....I've almost finished putting the second of the two "Dusty As DJ" radio programmes onto CD from cassette. I'd be willing to convert anything you have!

It's really not difficult once all the right connections are made. I can try "talking" somebody through it, or would be happy to do it myself.

As I'm only on dial up, it would probably be too painful to upload the final file, but somebody else could do it from the CD.

Let me know how/if I can help,

Jen 😊 😊

Carole, if they are cassette tapes, they could be copied, and then copies sent to Tim or Jen who could whip them onto DVD.

Back to the original topic: I never felt the picture looked a lot like Dusty. More like... Tina Turner, maybe. Like Nancy said, the face is too round. Actually, I've put a pic from the denim session in front of it on the CD cover.

You put it over your teeth to protect them from rough boys (and girls) when playing contact sports. Don't tell me you never had one Nancy!
