...or in this case it is. Tom and Mark talked on another thread about where Dusty had lived after coming back from Amsterdam. I thought this could be a thread where we could talk about, and post pictures of, the places where she did live.

When Dusty came back from Amsterdam, she first lived with Pat for about 3 months. She then moved into a flat not far from Pat in Fox Lane, Palmers Green. From there she moved to 'Wellbank' in Taplow, a house that she bought rather than rented. After that it was on to Frogsmill at Hurley, the only one I have a picture of.

I'm not that well up on North London knowledge but I presume that, re Tom saying that Dusty lived in Southgate, this is close enough to be the same flat that Pat told me of in Palmers Green.

Oh gosh, are you taunting the rest of us to drag out our pics of Dusty's homes? 😊

Here are a couple of shots of where Dusty lived in Hurley, about 15 minutes outside Henley. The first one is taken from the back showing the communal gardens and to be honest, I don't think we were sure which house was Dusty's, it could have been one of those, or the one next door picture. The other shot is taken from the front of the houses, her view down to the river.

Thanks for posting Carole.....the houses at Hurley look a little unusual from the outside to say the least! But I'm sure Dusty loved living there.....I recall a postcard for sale on E-bay within the past year from Dusty to Simon at Frogmil/Hurley as he was cat-sitting, it may have been no. 8?.....or am I getting mixed up again.....(nothing unusual in that!)

That vine at Aubrey Walk is awesome. Took a picture of it in April '04 with no leaves and just short time later full of leaves!

The first pic...with number 113... is that door extra large or what!
It makes you look so tiny, Nancy. It must have been a challenge for little Dusty to open.

It's not actually in Henley itself Matt, it's about 2 miles outside of it and it's easy to miss!

I took a few and have put them at the end of one of my online albums : More piccies

Don't know who lives there now (someone pretty well off though I'd say!) but it's a lovely house in a fairly quiet setting with nice views so who owns it is very lucky even without the connection!

Last weekend when I went with my mate back to Henley we took a minor detour to Taplow 😊! All I've heard about the house there is that it w: fairly modern so I had a scout round (with my camera which goes everywhere with me!) and the only 'Wellbank' I could find was a row of house: one end of the village opposite the church - appropriately named St Nicolas! 🍷

Wondered if anyone else had been there at all or has any clue if the place I found was the right one?!?

I've recently been reading through the corrections that Fred Perry wrote after the publication of DWD. The book mentions that Dusty moved from Dona Teresa to a rental in Sierra Alta Way, close to Lily Tomlin and Jane Wagner and next door to Phil Spector. Fred in his notes adds...

The neighbour on the other side was famed MGM star of the 30's and 40's, the legendary Norma Shearer, who as Dusty described it to me, could heard falling drunk into her afternoon tea every day at 4pm!

Many times, whenever I was round there, at least 3 or 4 times a week, I stood on chairs, I borrowed a small stepladder, I crawled through the bushes, but I never saw Miss Shearer...though, like Dusty, I could often hear this fluting voice coming through the hedges. This same house was almost across the street from MGM director George Cukor's house in which grounds was a guest house that Kate Hepburn used to stay in when and Tracy needed to hide away for some privacy. Another co-incidence, Eden Kane lived on the other side of the street, just down the road, and was doing very well in real estate. Small world. He and his wife and family lived almost across the road from Lily and Jane.

A few years ago a relative of mine mentioned that Dusty lived in a house with some girls just outside Hertford.
