Nah she wasn't scary, just damn rude and one thing I can't stand is rudeness when there's no need for it - especially coming from people who peer down their nose and think they're better than you cos they have a four wheel drive and a posh house by the river... makes me flippin' mad 😡😡

OK... deep breath and relax... 🙄

Totally agree, Bev. It's sad when people think they're superior just because they have more money. Anyway, you seem to have more fun than the "toad of frogmill". 😊

It'll take more than the miserable old toad of Frogmill to keep me down and stop me having fun I can tell you... maybe I can ask Dusty to send one of her geese round for me!! 😊😏

I think maybe a wee bit later in the day would suit you better then eh Matt?! 😊

If you were in England Mary it'd be a pleasure to show you all around the houses (so to speak!) 🙏

Hmmm... how long does a detour to Stockholm take these days?? Maybe I could just about manage it... if I break a few traffic laws!!! 🙄

LOL! 🙏

I've taken some friends round the ABBA places in Stockholm. It's a nice way to get to know a city. 🙏

Last weekend when I went with my mate back to Henley we took a minor detour to Taplow 😊! All I've heard about the house there is that it was fairly modern so I had a scout round (with my camera which goes everywhere with me!) and the only 'Wellbank' I could find was a row of houses at one end of the village opposite the church - appropriately named St Nicolas! 🏠

Wondered if anyone else had been there at all or has any clue if the place I found was the right one?!?

This is a discussion from a while back and at the time I asked Pat about it. She wasn't sure and dropped a note to Jill, Dusty's friend who I presume still lives there. Apparently, she's been travelling and Pat just heard back from her and called me. The row of houses in the pic is actually not Dusty's row, but Jill's. Dusty lived in the house at the end of the row to the left, which you can't quite see. On this pic from the Taplow site, you can just see the next row of houses.

Bs I was a row out 🤔 However that does mean another day out for me and my trusty camera at some point 😊👍

Is that to the left of your piccie as we look at it - the lamppost end? This is the end of the first row/beginning of the other row :

There's a few houses down there too set back further from the road... when you say "Dusty lived in the house at the end of the row to the left" do you literally mean the very last house in the row? (Just to make it a wee bit easier for me! 🤔)

Bev, from the conversation with Pat, I took it that the pic you took was of Jills row, her house being the first one (nearest the camera) and that "Mary's" house was the first one in the next row, of which you can just spot a roof in my picture. Maybe that's the same house as the one you just posted?

Hmmm... a radioactive Dust?!? 🚫 I think my Dusty 'radar' must have been in for a service that day!

Well I had nothing much to do today so... this is the other row of houses :

and the end house :

Hopefully this is the right place this time! If not... I'll be back!

If you mean immediate surroundings then nope no need for another trip! 🍷

View up the road from the house :

Down the road towards the house:

Church of St Nicolas just along the road :

The house opposite(ish 🍷) :

And just to give you an overall impression of the area :

Just below the lovely red circle you can see two long grey rooflines, that's the two rows of houses!
Will that suffice?!?!?

P.S. If any of our international members ever make it to the UK I'd be happy to take on the role of "Dusty House Guide" for the duration! 🍷🏠

Bev, will that include an encounter with the evil cow near the other house, the one who declared she wished they'd never heard of 'that woman'?

It is a fairly quiet area and the locals seem friendly enough so I'm sure we'd be safe unless you're planning on bringing a coach party Cor?! 🤔

Ah yes the lovely lady at Frogmill... I can arrange that for you Nancy at no extra charge if you like!! 😊👍

You'll have the benefit of jetlag, Kathy, so you'll have no problem! We'll just party all night! 🤔

I sign up for that tour as well for next year's DD, Bev! Will you book the coach or shall I? 🤔

Mads and Clare conducted themselves as mature, young women at Doyles Restaurant when we met and due to Pam and I having a long way to drive home, no alcohol was consumed. However, Ms. Piggy kept dipping her straw into the next table's wine bucket and acted like a complete pig!🐷

Tow path's a bit narrow for a bus or even a minibus but the road goes right down to the houses so we could always plan our assault from the front and really annoy the heck outta them!!😄 There's also a footpath from the road too so if all else fails we could wander down singing very loudly all our favourite Dusty songs!!🐷

No 5:00am starts this time I promise... unless you'd all prefer to go under cover of darkness so you can't be identified when the annoying woman complains to the local authorities!!!😄
