Annie just appeared on our local public radio station, WBUR...actually this was taped long ago, but interesting coincidence that was broadcast today as she is heading to Boston. Anyway here is the link - -hopefully the show will open right up for you. You can slide the bar forward --she appears at about 29.30 Her segment is 10-15 minutes. Enjoy!!

Thank you Nancy. That was just about perfect. Thanks Robin and Annie. I could have listened for hours. I loved the inclusion of Madeline Bell and Pino Donaggio too. Really cool. A spot on interview. Boston and Manchester are now super cool in my book 😊😊 Thanks again.

Thanks Nancy and hey someone else that said she saw her at the Brooklyn Fox 😊

I always got the impression that Boston tends to play more of Dusty than many other cities or town across the US.

thanks for posting Nancy...I quite enjoyed it. Nice amount of time to cover more than a few Dusty facts. I was happy to hear that the interview was with the pleasing Robin Young. well done Annie..nice to hear you always giving kudos to the Dusty fans. 😊

Marty...I think Boston just has a strong eclectic music community, along with good varied radio selection (always has) , especially for its size. ..not too mention a few dedicated Dusty fans. 😊

Good interview as always Annie and I did get the feeling that Robin Young had definitely read your book thoroughly. I would have been happy to have listened to you for longer.....one day someone will ask how you came to write this book. I know, but I'll bet those that don't would be in interested too.

That's why you live there I expect Paula isn't it.

Thanks for listening and for the kind comments! Robin and her producer, Emiko, were both well prepared; in a pre-interview conversation they asked me to send them the Madeline Bell and Pino Donaggio clips, which I happily supplied! I was delighted that they played so much music during the interview.

I drove to Philadelphia to tape the show in a radio station studio while Robin's voice was piped in from Boston. She seems like a smart, fun, nice person. In the intervening 2 weeks, she and Emiko spliced in the sound clips and edited the conversation so that it all fit within the 15-20 minute segment. The sound engineer in Philadelphia was a huge Dusty fan and he and I had a long chat about Madame D after the taping.

I think this was the first interview that I actually enjoyed!

Thanks again, everyone, for the good vibes. I'm *very* aware that the LTDers are listening and I think of you when I'm on the hot seat!
