I thought there was a thread on this somewhere but I can't find it. Anyway, I was wondering if anyone has heard anymore about it, like when it's to be on TV for instance. Here's part of a newspaper clipping.

Newspaper clipping titled 'EXCLUSIVE' by Chris Goodman, Music Editor. The article discusses the BBC's Christmas schedule featuring a 'Duet Impossible' show where modern acts perform with deceased pop stars. It lists acts like Sugababes with Dusty Springfield, Westlife with Roy Orbison, and Lulu with Marvin Gaye.

SUGABABES? are they even fans of Dusty's? i bloody hope so.. i'm not a fan of their music at all, but hopefully they'll do Dusty justice with this duet.

thanks for scanning in the article, Carole

I could definitely think of better musical partners for Dusty than the Sugababes, who I guess have an album to promote. It would have been interesting to see Joss Stone actually sing alongside Dusty and although I'm not a Robbie Williams fan, he's a big Dusty fan and that could have been interesting.

Yeah Dusty deserves someone better/more famous. She's the best singer of all time and she's paired up with the Sugababes???

The Sugababes are huge in the UK - just been named as the biggest female hitmakers of the 21 century (I know we're only 5 or 6 years in - depending on how you're counting). I like a lot of their songs. Particularly this one - <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VTTI4Hm7Qyg>

Joss Stone or Robbie would have been good choices, but it could have been a lot worse - Westlife or someone.

Ok let's be realistic.....there are few artists that can stand next to Dusty nowadays and Sugarbabes are not even too close to think it about!!!!You can tell even by their foolish name!!Dusty, above all others, was a professional not only cause people still remember her, but she studied music, she knew what was singing.Artist of today, just open their mouth and shoot!!Let's as all remember a frase through an interview..."I was born to make people happy"....and wise to leave her alone!!kisses to everyone.....

OMGGG how cool would it be to put Dusty and Elvis together with clips of them both doing YDHTSYLM...???

Like they're both amazing singers in their own right. Everyone knows Elvis, and everyone SHOULD know Dusty, even though some dont...

Im sure Elvis would rate high with viewers, and therefore Dusty would rate high...🙄

The Sugarbabes CANNOT sing live. I think they make great records but it's sacrilege to 'pair' Dusty up with anyone of a lesser calibre than her vocally. I guess at least she'll shine, but I think it's a tacky idea. 'Corner of the Sky' is an exception because Petula Clark is her contemporary and the track needed finishing.

I don't know about anyone else but I find the whole idea most distasteful & I don't think Dusty would have been

I guess its like the remixing argument- IMO if it's done intelligently then maybe there's something to be enjoyed in it. (I've yet to here a great remix of anything of Dusty's although someone posted a weird mashup of the Look of Love which was good.)

Dusty & Elvis -well no arguing calibre there. The problem is wht if she HATED him... ha ha...

Dusty and Aretha? Now that would be tempting - they could duet on Preacherman.

T xx

Posted - 13/12/2006 : 11:56:12

how about Dusty & Patti LaBelle duetting on YDHTSYLM? 🤔 Mark & i would enjoy it, even if nobody else..

but i agree with what you're saying, Tim - they should have chosen someone more "on her level". if it had to be a young, modern performer, maybe they could have chosen Joss Stone - she'd have been a better choice, IMHO.

and on the subject of remixes; i quite like the White Label Remix of SOAPM - have you heard that? hey, maybe Scissor Sisters should remix one of Dusty's more "electro" songs - can you imagine it - it'd be great! 🎧

Look what I just found in my email box....

Dear Carole,

I hope you are well. If you remember you very kindly helped me contact the estate of Dusty Springfield in the summer.

Well we have now finished the show and it looks great. Dusty's estate kindly gave us their permission and she will be 'dueting' with the Sugababes!

The sing choice is not an obvious one - it was very hard to find a suitable performance which we could manipulate in the perfect way (nigh impossible in fact!). We ended up going for Dusty singing 'Dancing In The Streets' from the NME awards 1965. The Sugababes act as a backing band for Dusty. The effect is really cool as it actually looks like Dusty is there in the studio. We would have picked one of her most famous songs but unfortunately, the process didn't quite work with the archive we found.

Anyway, the show is being broadcast on Christmas Eve at 5.45pm on BBC1. Please spread the word.

Best regards

James

So now we know.

I was thinking just the same thing Jonathan! I'll still set the tape though, to be on the safe side 😊 There are no backing singers on stage with Dusty on Dancing in the Street, at least none you can see. Maybe he means backing vocalists rather than band, I think Dougie would put up a fight for his geetar 😊

I really love the Dancing in the Steets clip because amongst other things it reminds me of the Dusty I saw so often on stage back in the sixties. She always had such tight skirts and such high heels but still managed to move around the stage sooooo well. The thing about all the Poll Concert clips is that the sound isn't great and can seem quite thin. It was such a big arena and without the technical gizmo's we now have, there wasn't a lot you could do about it. Maybe they can fill the sound out on this clip with extra backing, that could be interesting. And in a way, it's quite good that it's not one of her classics that they're messing with. Having said all that, I saw the Sugababes live on the Royal Variety Performance last week and they were awful! At least being a recording, they can have a few go's at it.

Veering slightly off topic cos i saw the name Spencer Davis.

United Kingdom
4205 Posts

The Spencer Davies Group featured a fantastic organist called Stevie (later Steve) Winwood. He left to join the group Traffic and later Blind Faith with Eric Clapton, Ginger Baker and Ric Grech.

During the summer of 1967, Spencer Davis put together a new Spencer Davis Group line-up, bringing in guitarist Phil Sawyer and organist Eddie Hardin. One of the rejected applicants to be auditioned was a young piano player named Reginald Dwight who would later launch a solo career, re-naming himself Elton John. The first Spencer Davis Group single to be released without Winwood in the line-up was "Time Seller" which reached number 30 in August, 1967.

I can recommend Steve Winwood's albums as well worth a listen

Okay, back on topic 😊 I'm really looking forward to Duets Impossible, should be great!

I've got to weigh in on this one. I really dislike the idea of this show - I first heard about it on the Roy Orbison forum, because someone had the bright idea to team up Roy with Westlife on this show. I can't stand Westlife - this slick interpretation of soulful songs, performed with phoney gestures and enunciations while sat on stools staring wistfully into the camera is the antithesis of what great performers like Roy (and of course Dusty) were all about. Sugababes, I honestly don't mind. I don't like them but I don't mind them, in their own context. All that is opinion, of course.

But what is a matter of fact, is that these people have sadly, passed on, and are having artistic career decisions made for them on their behalf. Decisions that they may very well have not agreed with, but they are no longer around to protest. It's the idea of someone effectively being forced to sing with someone whether they like it or not, that really riles me.

/End rant :P

Yeah, good point. I bet their management (of the artist who's still around) counts on the vehicle/bandwagon effect that adds to the homage effect.

I absolutely agree with you about Westlife, they're pointless to my mind and they just took one of my favourite ever songs and made it bland (The Rose), so I can understand as a Roy fan why you may be dismayed.

The unfortunate thing about the artists who are no longer with us is that stuff will keep on happening that is now way beyond their control. Someone is obviously giving their permission though. Be it books, musicals, films, recipients of their awards or shows like this. Petula Clark has just added her vocals to some unfinished ones of Dusty's and having heard it, I'm thrilled with the result and I hope that Dusty would be too. To my eyes and ears, it's one of the positive things that have happened. I'm interested to see how they do this show and hoping that Dusty comes out of it with no loss of face.

I liked it!

Sophie, if you don't have Nero, I think you can download DVD Shrink free--. If you can't get it copied, send it to me or Laura or Zippy and we'll take care of it and then do that tree thing. Thanks.

Well, it was good in bits, the fake Dusty person sort of ruined it for me 😞 Still, good to see the lady on telly over the festive season, albeit briefly. A couple of surprising clips of the 80's Dusty in the intro....geez those fashions take some beating 😊

Carole do you know what show the 80's clip of Dusty in pink singing SOAPM was from?

Oh My God... I loved it!! I couldn't believe i was seeing Dusty in the 60's performing in 2006!!! It was pretty good i thought, the Sugababes did a good job... How did they get Dusty like there and it looked real? It was so well done and i loved it 😊

What is Duet Impossible? Is it like a weekly show or something? I quite liked it 😊

Have just caught up with it on YouTube...

Very clever technically, but cos it's fake - there's no chemistry, WHATSOEVER.!!

I've never been impressed with this performance, although she looks great -excited and happy!

Her wild enthusiasm tramples the song underfoot for me and her gutsiness sits uneasily with the Sugar's trembly pitch.. Her vocal also seems faster than the Sugababes who seem to have been practising to Marth & the Vandellas original - which was at a slightly slower speed. THAT is the definitive version for me - not hers in this case. I always think the mess she made of this song is the Temptations fault - wasn't this when she first developed a taste for her favourite colour...LOL!

IMHO I would rather see the effort put into cleaning up and representing genuine footage of Dusty. Technology is great though - one day soon we will be able to enjoy holographic images of our idols!

If you mean the purple sequins Clive, that was Live At Her Majesty's in October '85, not one of Dusty's better moments. She, apparently had been wonderful in rehearsals all day but got more and more nervous as the day went on. She sounded very shakey during the hits medley and got the note at the end of Quiet Please very wrong, although the rest of the song was fine and it was the first time I'd seen her perform it, not having been at the RAH. The outfit outdid Sue Ellen in the shoulder pads stakes. 😞 At the end, the host Jimmy Tarbuck, gave her a big hug and I always felt he was saying "you did OK, don't worry".

As for Dancing in the Street, she did NOT mess it up Tim! There is no way she was under the influence of anything other than adrenalin, not back then.

thanks Carole, I had heard about that performance but never saw or heard any of it before.

Incidentally I'd say many people who watched Duet Impossible went looking for a Dusty CD containing Dancing In The Street-unfortunately there isn't one.

I wasn't saying she actually messed it up, Carole. I just think she was very breathless through it and it's taken at a rattling pace that affects the quality of the vocal performance. It's very exciting to watch though - she's loving every minute of it. It scores highly for me on her enthusiasm alone. Whether this is purely down to adrenaline or not, none of us are qualified to say. I was just speculating playfully given Dusty's OWN recollections of that time.

I personally think youse are all reading too much into this!! But thats kool 😊 I reckoned it was great just to see Dusty perform with a modern group 🙄 I really liked it.

I liked it too, Clare, though the Sugababes can't really hold a candle to our Dust... 😊

Cor xx

Yeah true, but at least they didnt full on ruin it i spose!! That'd be a bit annoying... 🙄

"I'm not Mama's little baby no more..."

Yeah I know Clare, silly really..

It's a bit of fun but she had no say in the matter - which makes me feel a bit uncomfortable.

I wonder what the most unlikeliest duet could be... Dame Edna was pretty mad for real.. that was hilarious at the time!

T x

Awww nah Timbo it ain't silly, i find it interesting that you guys have so much to say about it 😊 Probably coz i'm not even smart and don't even think of these things lol!! 🙄

I don't think she would have minded it, but who can really tell and she probably would have supported the Sugababes for the sort of music they make. I think she'd have found the body double quite hilarious though, she seemed to have about 6 inches on Dusty!

I watched the show last night. Dusty & the Sugababes duet was really surprisingly good as from the outset I had been rather sceptical about this project. It was lovely to see Dusty perform "Dancing In The Street" but it was also rather surreal and left me with a lump in my throat. The Sugababes made excellent 'Vandellas'. I'm sure that Dusty would have been happy to sing with the Sugababes as they are a cut above the average girl group. BTW the Marvin Gaye & Lulu duet was also worthy of notice.

A body double?! I thought they just kinda cut her out and stuck her on stage with some technology or something.. like only the people on tv could see her and all the audience could see were the Sugababes. Am i so wrong on this?😱
