As you know I bought these boots in the Dusty Day auction this year. Madeline said they had been worn once. Pat mentioned to me that Dusty probably wore them around the house. I thought no more of it until I came across the publicity photo for the "A Very Fine Love" album. They certainly look like the same boots to me. I hope so.

If memory serves me correctly, you got them at auction for less than they originally cost, too!

Good on you!

Yep, got them for £85. They originally cost £129.99. Still got the price tag inside! They were made in Italy and the brand is Bruno Magli.

Wow, cogratulations!

I was thinking, (cant find them to save my life), but what about the photos where she's dressed almost all in white, and she's standing up, with a white cowboy hat mayyyyyyyyybe? Is she wearing these shoes?

LOVE MADS.

I think Michael is quite right about those boots. I sat with them in my hands thinking, I know these, but then they were whisked away to be auctioned! Damn, with a little more aforethought, I could have slipped them under the counter 😞
Mary, I have a pair of Dusty's boots that could have come from the seventies, though more likely eighties, they're canvas with sequins and such on them and very well worn.

Can I ask a really daft question? What do people actually do with things such as the boots, or the leather jacket? Heather asked the lady who bought the jacket if she would ever wear it and she said no.

I think it's just to have something that was owned by someone you admire - to think that they once wore them, owned them, etc. I know to some people such things seem a little sad but hey, whatever floats your boat.

Oh no! I don't think it sad at all! I, too, bought something at the auction so I'm not throwing stones at anyone lol. I just wondered literally what people actually do with the clothes and other items - do they just go in the closet with everything else, get framed, put somewhere special..

It's ok Will, I was just talking about people in general. I might put up a pic of one of Dusty's belts I own too.

I have some of Dusty's shoes, one pair I occasionally wear and another pair of pink and purple heels, I have on display. They're sort of special and well worn.

Carole, leading on from my original question, exactly how do you display them? This was more what I was trying to ask first time round. Poorly. I know people get football shirts signed and then frame them. and I would certainly love to have David Beckham against my wall ;) ... but if its boots or something non-flat, how do you display that kind of thing? I know it still sounds like a right daft question.

When I get around to it Will, I'll take a photo. The shoes are just on top of a bookcase with a couple of other Dusty related things. My friend Michael used to have three pairs of Dusty's stilleto's in line on a ledge as you went up the open plan stairs.

Oh that would be great, Carole - and thanks for the info :) I like the idea of the stilleto's on the stairs - I'd bet that was eye catching.

I was privileged to see the ones at Michaels one time with Carole, and they looked SO right there. Carole I recall you have quite a few pairs of Dusty's shoes, do you still have them all?

I don't have a pic or video of Dusty wearing these shoes either, but the imprints of her feet are in them! I have four other pairs, two shoes and two boots. I keep this pair on show as they're rather special. That's a Dusty sweetpea in the frame and the picture on the wall is of the Cliffs of Moher. There's also a smug looking Henley Bear there too, bought from the teddy bear shop in the town.

nice Carole, I'm guessing that those shoes are smaller than they look. 😊
Oh, I would love it if I was able to grow a sweet pea like that from the few remainders in the packet that I won from Cas. 😊.they might be too old to produce anything, unfortunately.

Well the size of the boots I have are a size 38, which I think translates into a U.K. size 5. Correct me if I'm wrong.

All the shoes that were auctioned at Sotherby's were from the 80's Cor. Simon and Pat both remembered Dusty wearing these pink/purple ones and a couple of the others Dusty is wearing on video clips. The little pair of well worn canvas boots I have were made specially for Dusty by a friend. I think maybe she was called Diane, but I'm not sure. The sizes vary slightly, half a size up or down on a size 5.
