I love Dusty's mod period - look at those shoes!

Was the Prince Regent's pavillion open for visitors back in the 60s? Do you suppose Dusty visited it? Would she have liked it? What do you think?

bingo!!!!thanks for that -- i am determined to find out where it is!!! altho the white cliffs in the far background maybe the answer - there are some close to brighton many thanks-- the reason is,, i have walked thru the botannical gardens in sydney australia where dustys "goin' back" video was filmed---- specifically macquarie (sp)? point just where Dusty is shown walking under the trees- if you look close you will spot the sydney opera house!!!

May I say, as someone who never made a point to go to the beach while I was in the UK, you people call that a beach!?

Hey Alice, we can beat that one near where I live, WSM, Weston Super Mare, the tide comes in and goes out miles twice a day, indeed the water completely disappears from view, and leaves a mile of thick black mud where the water was. LOL you cheeky little blighter.

I don't class beaches with pebbles really beaches either Alice, they're a killer to lie on as well! As Dusty's parents lived in Hove, I'd guess the photo's were taken more to that end of the town, Wilbury Rd was their address I believe i think these pictures were taken along what is now known as marine drive or south coast road-- the opposite end of Brighton from Hove-- there are no white cliffs in Hove-- unless the council has moved them?--
