Does anyone have any pictures of Dusty from the Rolf Harris Show in 1971? I love her performance of Up on the Roof especially, I also love Knowing When To Leave and I would like a picture - Thanks 😊😊 and that was 9 years after! KENNY EVERETT (is that how it's spelt??)

from 1971 - she sang knowing when to leave and then up on the roof.

Kenny and Lee seem like such different personalities! I could never have guessed they were married...! 🙄

I suspect that Lee may have mellowed a little over the years. There is a story in DWD with Mama Cass, Dusty and Lee going out on the town in LA. Coming home Cass passed out in the car. A much inebriated Lee and Dusty found a wheelbarrow, hauled her into it, ran it up to Cass' front door, rang the bell and roared off down the street laughing! This sounds more like Kenny than the Lee of today!

Lee sounded (and looked) very new age in that documentary... maybe it was Reflections, not quite sure. She sat in front of a large gem stone. So Dusty and her (and Kenny) go way back, then.

Yes, but then there is the Lee who appeared in the Southbank Show....not quite so new age, IMO.

Is that the one where she talks about Dusty "head butting" her? In DWD there is a reference to Lee turning to alternate/spiritual/new age healing professionally. And after Dusty's cancer returns there is a reference to Dusty asking to consult Lee professionally.

Head butting and more, is my recollection. Didn't sound too much like a spiritual guide reminiscing, but hey, I don't know the ladeh or her history with Dusty.

I think there are a few people who don't care for Lee Everett but as you rightly say, we don't know the history.....at least not from Dusty lips. I thought the head butting story was awful and completely pointless. And what really annoys me about her is the way she smirks and chuckles when she's talking about bad times in Dusty's life.

Yes I agree, it was a gratuitous piece of information that didn't fit. Her attitude seemed inappropriate. (Was she on something?) I got the impression that Lee thought this was her last 15 minutes of fame and had to "get it all out". At least DWD makes the point that Dusty never had any intention ever of doing away with herself. Lee sets out to change perceptions on that--for what reason I cannot imagine. It is hard to believe that this is the same person that Dusty turned to for spiritual guidance--they did, however, go back a long way together.

It always baffles me (hmm that word sounds funny)..that one would have a few moments to relate a memory or thoughts of someone they knew..friend?...and they choose to say what they say...even if they thought it ..why would that be your choice of words?..is it really so hard to be nice?..
