Excellent, Wendy. And we're not too generous to you - you are to generous to us. 😊

You've drawn so many pictures of Dusty - do you think you could draw one without actually looking at a photo?

I might be able to Vicky, but I doubt it would be as good as copying a photograph, where you've got all the problems of light, shade, shadow, composition and perspective all solved for you by the camera. I've been going to give it a try one day. I should know Dust's face like the back of my hand by now.

Both are stunning Wendy! I especially like the one of Dusty that I like to call her "Natural Look" period. I also love to see Dusty smile.

oh, beautiful Wend. really like this one. I think you did a really nice job w/ her mouth on this one. I think I prefer this brown-tinted drawing to the B&W..though both are excellent, of course. 😊

How did I miss this?!

Another masterpiece from Wendy. I want to comment on something others usually don't and that is how magnificently you capture Dusty's magnificent hair--time after time.

I think the hair is Wend's "artistic signature" of sorts - you always recognise a Hampson by the hair (that's what the dealers will all say in years to come, when she is 'recognised')..

Argh - thanks you two - you know there's nearly always a reason for everything, for example Dusty said, she put all that eye make up because she was short sighted and couldn't see what she was doing.

In my case when I first started doing portraits I said to my father "I can't do the hair" and he said, "Why don't you do one strand at a time". So that was my approach almost forever onwards. I don't think I can do it any other way now, or ever could, once I adopted that method. Like you say Will - it is my signature now.
