In 1968, Kim Novak starred in a very unsuccessful film, 'The Legend of Lylah Clare'. There are several online clips - here's one

I think Kim Novak looks amazingly like the late 60s early 70s Dusty.

What do others think?

Yes there is certainly a similarity there.

I can't see much similarity but I'd like to see the movie. It looks like a trashy classic; just right for late Saturday nights. Poor Kim! Checking out the movie, I came across a reference to a Natalie Wood box-set so thanks for the tip!

There is some similarity I can see it. not sure if she would have played a good Dusty though....I've only seen her in the Alfred Hitchcock movie Vertigo....which she was awesome in.

Not to change the subject...but is there any new news on a Dusty movie or any kind of update???...haven't heard or seen anything lately.

Kim can't really act that well which is not to say she didn't have her moments eg Vertigo and Picnic. She looked good though.

Not much news. What is interesting though is Vicki Wickham is listed as a consultant on the Kristin Chenoweth Dusty movie which is scheduled for 2011 ie nothing exists yet - it's still trying to get funded.

There has been nothing posted recently on the net, Josh. Soon as I hear anything, I'll post it on the 'Grapevine' thread..

I can definitely see a simiarity between Dusty and Kim in some of the shots. I think in part it is due to a hairstyle similar to one Dusty had. I also notice Robert Aldrich was associated with this movie--am I crazy or was he associated with Baby Jane?

United Kinadom

I did see a likeness between Kim and Dusty back in the sixties. I remember my dad commenting on it once when Kim was on telly, it was the eyes he said. The beginning of 'If I Was Down and Out' when Dusty's eyes are in close up, is a look-a-likey moment.

Well, here's the lovely Kim on a lovely Sunday morning...

Make-up and hair play a trick I think. But there is just a touch of likeness. I'd never link those shots of Dusty at the top of the screen to Kim Novak though.

I'd never seen that 'Down and Out' clip. Thanks, it's fab. Dusty looks so tiny!

Hmm...I think I see the resemblance, but mostly in the haircut 😊

Kim gives an excellent performance in the controversial Frank Sinatra Movie 'Man with the Golden arm', she plays her part (rightly) very cool, maybe a look of Dusty in Kim in this late 50's pic too! 😊

On some of the pictures I think there is a slight resemblance, mostly the hair, sometimes the expression on her face and a few smiles.

Not as a put-down to Dusty but Kim Novak is (was) far more beautiful than Dusty! That being said, Dusty had her own unique beauty & her own look. Who else can be identified by just a pair of eyes? I am no shrink but perhaps all the drugs and self harm came from a self-loathing based on not being perfect enough in her own eyes just as she was never satisfied with her recordings! Guys, please don't attack me on Dusty vs. Kim as it is just my opinion! Ain't it nice to have me back?? LMAO! Uncle Keith P.S. The movie may have been unsuccessful but as I remember it was pretty good!

True that Dusty was critical of her looks, for sure.

As far as the most beautiful, it's a matter of taste. I can't separate looks from personality etc and I find Dusty more appealing.

Opinions are OK, as long as respectful, not to worry.
