Was Dusty ever committed to wax for Madame Tussauds?

I haven't been there for many years... last year I seem to remember Sophie, Claire & Rob went, but I can't recall if they found Dusty was there..

I know they rotate their exhibits - I hate to think of her languishing in a gloomy basement or being melted down and made into Aretha Franklin or Diana Ross...

I went with that group last year too. What a bizarre place. Anyway, Dusty was not there. The only musical relics of that era I recall were Sir Tom, The Beatles, and Dame Shirley.

What a shame if Dusty were never enshrined in wax, but something tells me we might have heard about it if she were.

I'm 100% certain she never made it into Tussards. Having seen some of the 'dummies' in there in the past, I'm sort of relieved!

I think you should submit it as a possible actress on the Nicole Kidman as Dusty thread....sure to be more popular than some of the other actresses suggested!

Honestly, pretty cool!! Will you come cook my dinnah?

There's definitely something Dustyesque about the hand movements, isn't there.

I thought the same - definitely captured the style there. The hang of the dress is dead on too.

I think Dusty should be in Madame Tussauds, on condition the model actually looked like her. Past models there haven't done the subject justice.
