Hi Gang, whilst googling for Dusty lyrics for the 'Dustyyese' thread I came across the song 'Nothing rhymed', which was originally written and sung by Gilbert O'Sullivan (very popular early 70's UK), and was wondering did Dusty ever record this song?, if so is it available on CD.

Thanks

Dusty never did a studio recording of it Mark but she performed it on The Marty Feldman Comedy Machine tv show in 1971.

Thank you for the info Clive, it's a shame Dusty didn't record it, it's such a lovely song.

I don't suppose the TV appearance is available on anything?

Don't worry about postage - It's like 50p to send a DVD! - Thing is - I can't copy just the one song!

OH OH OH!! - I have it on a video aswell - I am putting all my videos onto DVD so what I'll do is put that one song seperately! - You'll have to wait about a week or 2 though.

I love this performance of Nothing Rhymed AND Take Me To the Pilot, both from the Marty Feldman show.

The way she dressed and the type of songs suggests to me that she was trying out a new style - more up to date, away from the glittery frocks etc. Didn't last of course but I always think of these performances as being "different" to anything else she did - and I think they're both great!

What do you think of them?

Andrew

I only seen a clip of them both. I have them on video but I don't have a video player yet. I hope to get one sometime this week so I can put them onto DVD.
