Thanks Bev 😊

"The finest soul singer this country produced"

I like it! Remove the word soul and i like it even more!

Thanks Bev. I wish the journalist had come to Dusty Day instead and then he could have really seen for himself the joy that her music brings not just to "middle aged women" or "lesbians" but to straight men, straight women, gay men, the young, the old and everyone else inbetween! I had to look up the word "travail", the dictionary says "(make) painful or laborious effort", not sure what that's all about. Haven't got the paper, so don't know if there are any more pics but one of the beautiful flowers that were at the stone that day would have been nice.

Ooops sorry Carole... I forgot to upload the piccie! Not that it's a particularly good one, a close up would have been better as this one isn't exactly showing it at it's best plus being able to see the inscription would have been nice too!!

disappointing but for the intensity of attention it

Sack the photographer I'd say! He must have been more impressed with the litter bin and scaffolding.

Not really in better quality, but without the writing around it.....

The article is on page 24 of the black 'Weekend' Magazine that comes with the paper Sophie.

A wee bit bigger :

Thanks for posting the article Bev, I also had look up 'travail!!', (maybe the Guardian's aimed towards well-educated types! 🤔😬), though I don't believe for one minute us fans are 'eyed warily' when in Henley! 😬

What a nice picture in the article, really. Note that we have two similar ones in our banner, with the daisies. They make her look so youthful and well since three's a crowd..funny that I too looked up "travail"...seems he thought that the source of Dusty's attraction was her "suffering brought by pain and anguish"...until he met up with a group of lesbians at the cemetery? 🙄...so whats the attraction again?? He does say she was the "finest soul singer that the Britian has produced" & that "she created some incomparable records"...guess that wouldn't be a good enough reason 🙄

...also, yeah, what's up with that picture of Dusty grave..looks like a drive by shot. 🙄
