Don't think I've read all of this before, interview with Dusty by Paul Du Noyer from Mojo magazine 1995

Great interview. So laid back and comfortable with who she was.

shes so straightforward and assured in her latter years,I wish she had been more comfortable in her skin during the early years. 🙄 her desire for privacy is one of the reasons why I hope they never do a film about her. I believe she would have hated it.
it is sad to feel her frustration with her career stutterings although sadly she did inflict some of the downsides on herself in her search for perfection.
I think she was just too good for this World. 🌹

thanks Clive..enjoyed the read. Dusty was feisty til the end 😊
16 yrs later and Mojo still provides a couple of more Dusty bits (see new box set & snippets threads)

Been a while since I'd read that; thanks Clive!

Dusty was indeed a pistol. 🤔

👍 Here Dusty makes some profound, and telling statements.

I loved it ! 🤔

👍 Thanks Clive.

Re this interview section:

I'm having my kitchen done and there's a real idiot who fitted it, and it was two or three millimetres off. I don't know how to put cupboards in, but I knew this was off. And the whole time there was this humouring of the little lady: There there, what does she know? I had to call a male friend and have him come down and say it was two or three millimetres off. Then it was: Oh! Course it is, guv!

Simon Bell posted on FB that it was indeed him who was the "male friend", and continues tongue in cheek "you know what an expert I am on kitchen fitting! lol"
