50 Greatest Debut Albums (#p146552)

by Zoey » Wed Feb 19, 2014 4:05 pm

A Girl Called Called Dusty is number 46 according to NME. 🤔 I haven't been through the higher numbers yet.

Thanks for this post Zoey.

What a great comment in NME -The diva destroyed all the lame-assed Cillas and Petulas with one husky hoof through " Anyone Who Had A Heart" 🤔 🎵 🎵 -.

Thanks Zoey. 🤔 I'm totally biased but it should have been much higher. 🤔 Still, It's very nice to see Dusty getting recognition 50 years on. 🤔 🤔

I think it goes by years actually. It mostly goes along a timeline. 😊 If it was ranked, The XX would have reached the top spot. I really like the XX, but their debut album isn't exactly legendary.

Well, they certainly got the 1963 and 1964 best debuts right. The Beatles and Dusty. 😊 One bad mistake on this list though, the best debut from 1966 is the first Mamas and Papas album, which is an absolute ground-breaking classic!!!! Rich.
