Saw this one in the Bulletin. Dusty and her crew played a place called the Gaumont, where they were served" cold, greasy roast beef sandwiches". Dusty discovered that, if she took a slice of bread off and threw the sandwich against the wall - it stuck! Soon they all bet on whose sandwich would take the longest to slide down the wall. Somewhere in some institution of higher learning, there's a scientific study that explains why we humans like to throw stuff against walls for entertainment. The management didn't care for Dusty's prank, but I can sure identify. When I was in the 1st grade at St. Adalbert's (1957-58) my friend and I went dow to the boys' bathroom where he showed me that if you wet a wad of toilet paper and threw it against the wall -it stuck! When you're 6 years old, this is tremendously entertaining! It was like we discovered plutonium down there! Were like two nuclear physicists chucking the stuff at the wall for over 20 minutes, not thinking that we would have to go back up and explain to Sister Mary Bertha just what the heck we were doing down there all that time! I don't remember exactly how we talked our way out of it, but my friend gave some lame explanation, and we lived another day. Somewhere over in England, a teenage Dusty would probably given us an A+ for that one!

Next time I see my friend I'll tell him that we may have started a time-honored tradition!

Good story Michael! 😊 Gee you guys must have been good in talking your way out of it with the nuns!

Your story is a lot better than my first grade story in Catholic School in the little girl's room. I could not open the latch in the stall as it was stuck. 😬 I started screaming! Another girl told me don't worry, I'll get you out. Sister Rose came in rather furious with me and too took me to an empty classroom. I was frightened out of my mind and sure I was going to get in big trouble. Looking back on it now, i think she only wanted me to calm down.

Actually Marty, I think we just got a pass, since we were only first graders. As time went on though, I didn't get off so easily! Michael
