We had a thread about Dusty dreams while back..

Well I had another one last night! (On LTD before bedtime again...maybe too much coffee...LOL)

Anyway - I had two 'scenes' talking with Dusty... Firstly she was being photographed and was very self conscious about a blonde wig she had on. Her eyes were beautifully made up (of course!). I would say physically - despite the wig - this was the mid 70s Dusty. She seemed uncomfortable with being photographed but resigned to it.

Then I was suddenly talking to her out of her 'Dusty' guise. She looked very ordinary (sorry!)- I asked her about singing and about her performing. She said she had no need to do it anymore. She was wearing dark olive brown linen shorts and a white blouse and had silver/grey hair cut in a shaggy bob. There was a hint of Germaine Greer about her... LOL.

Physically she was the age she would be now - in her late 60s. She seemed very relaxed - and I felt that way with her too. It was kind of a short meeting - and I can't remember too much more.. grrrr!

It reminded me of when I dreamt about my Mother when she passed on.

That doesn't make it real of course...

Although there was no direct message from Dusty's lips - (that I can remember) - maybe appearing to people is her way of saying thank you for still thinking about me - and don't worry - I'm fine.

Well I like to think that anyway. 😊

That's a nice thought Tim, that maybe appearing in dreams is Dusty's way of thanking her fans. That may not be as far fetched as it seems... its a nice dream. 😊

I've had a few dreams with Dusty in them over the years, but sadly they're 'wishful thinking' ones, I also have dreams about 'Les Grand Dames' of yesteryears 'Coronation Street' 47 year old Brit soap opera, such as 'Ena Sharples' is still with us, but again, they're wishful thinking ones

I could do you a copy of some 1960's Corrie if you want, Mark, anything to make you sleep peacefully..... all the Three Graces are there 😊

Aw Neil - Dusty would LOVE your sense of humour. (and drama) LOL

Dreams are sometimes the opposite of what would happen or be possible in reality.

Yeah, Ena Sharples' hairnet used to terrify me.. (till I got my own last year..)
