This image is from one of the newspaper cuttings posted on here recently, I'm sure, but I can't find where I originally got it from. Anyway, hope you like it. It's a lovely picture of Dusty (the original, I mean). Hopefully this version adds something to it.

Oh and at the risk of cross-posting...

She was indeed, Carole; but I think the answer to your question is - probably not; until, at the end, it was of much less importance to her anyway.
Glad you all like the images.

Okay to put some of these up on the fan art section of the webpage, Will?

Cas - a few years back Fraser sent me three proof photos of Dusty which he asked me to repair and hand colour. I have never seen these images anywhere else since he sent them to me.

The emails that came with them were on a now long-dead computer and I have no idea who the originals belonged to - I don't suppose you have any idea, do you? I have been working on one of them this evening and would like to post it here because it's a stunning image of Dusty, but I would prefer to have the permission of whomever the images originated from.

I'm going to take the liberty of posting my version of Fraser's Dusty photo.

I have tried to find out where the photo came from and who it belongs to and have had no success with that, nor have I found it on any of the Dusty sites I trawled last night. Should anyone recognise this image as theirs and want me to remove, please let me know and I'll do so gladly. But until then...

When Fraser sent the photo's (there were three of them) to me, they were clearly proof photos, as the large word PROOF emblazoned across them showed. They were in black and white and he asked me to repair them and take out the PROOF word and then to colour each of them, which I did. I sent them back with the adjustments made but otherwise they were unchanged. For this one, the original background has been removed, Dusty has been hand coloured and I have tried to give the image a different feel. It's no longer just a picture of Dusty sitting on a settee holding a teddy bear.

I hope you like it.

Beautiful Will...check your mail, as I have the original proofs...unfortunately I don't recall who gave them to me in the 60's. The pics have been posted on this site, but not by me, so Fraser must have passed them on to other Dusty fans...if anyone knows who they do actually belong to I'd love to know.
Fantstic job Will, Fraser spoke to me abot this and your work some time ago now.
