The last article is brilliant Darren.

In it dusty talks about her childhood. Really interesting! 🍷

Thanks you for all your posting 😊 😊

I Love Sandie too ❤️ but for me too she always comes second behind Dusty, Chart placings aside. But Dusty & Sandie were Chalk & Cheese. 🎵 Sandie for me was more pop, and girl next door but of course Dusty had the better voice and personality. But the 60's would have been poorer without Sandie. 🙏😞🙏

Sorry number one is Blurry, that's how it came. 🤖 here is a transcript:

Liverpool Empire

Dusty wakes 'em

"Merry King Cole " (Liverpool Empire) was a slow and dismal affair at Saturday's opening performance, until Dusty Springfield appeared in an all-too-brief spot towards the end.

You could almost sense the audience slumped in it's seats with boredom. Then Dusty crackled on to the stage (dressed stunningly in a long sparkling white gown with a red sash at the waist), and the effect was electric.

Dusty opened with a scorching "Nowhere To Run To" and followed it with a magnificent version of the Four Tops' hit "Reach Out I'll Be There. " We also had her leading "community singing" of "The More I See You" and Ringo's "Yellow Submarine" -an unexpected diversion for Dusty that proved completely effective. Her personality literally flung itself across the footlights.

Other numbers featured by her included her first solo hit "I Only Want to Be With You" "Goin' Back" and " You Don't Have To Say You Love Me"

Closing raver was "Shake" with her backing group The Echoes giving their usual tremendous support. A greatly underrated group. In a featured spot at the close of the first half (Neither act takes part in the actual pantomime) are Paul and..... (Cutting cut off here. 🤔 )

Couldn't find anything about this movie "The Sweet BRIDE" it should be THE SWEET RIDE. The song has same title but don't know if it's around. Film produced by Joe Pasternak who I've discovered was Emperor Rosko's dad. Well I found it, it's on LP Soundtrack of film.

I doubt Dusty was a "surfee" especially as she couldn't swim!

I noticed in the posting from 8/12 there is a small bit about Vikki Carr. Did any of you ever see her perform? She used to play near me in Reno all the time and I always went to see her. She has a really great voice with lots of power. Very enjoyable show. I was surprised to see her name Darren because I haven't thought about her in a long time. I will have to look and see if she still performs. Thanks for all your postings Darren, I really enjoy them. 🙏

Her success proves this to not be the case. I love having all these to read, thanks for posting .

I noticed in the posting from 8/12 there is a small bit about Vikki Carr. Did any of you ever see her perform? She used to play near me in Reno all the time and I always went to see her. She has a really great voice with lots of power. Very enjoyable show. I was surprised to see her name Darren because I haven't thought about her in a long time. I will have to look and see if she still performs. Thanks for all your postings Darren, I really enjoy them. 🙏

Vicki Carr does indeed still perform - but mostly in Latin American countries where she is still a huge draw.

Yes, I agree with Trek, you lucky people re: photos - Castaways. I am actually from Birmingham originally, I lived there but wasn't allowed to go. From what I remember it caused ructions at the time, I know I cried like a baby but it didn't make any difference, I remember I was furious. I just had to read the write-ups about the shows afterwards. Have never forgotten it but that's life I suppose.

Jennifer

I can relate to your comments Jennifer. I was living in Stafford at the time, still at school doing A levels and with very little money...there was no way my Dad was going to pay for me to go to Birmingham and there was probably school the next day too...lol

I did see Dusty once in Birmingham however.

When I had more money and more independence and would have been able to see her.....she had gone to America to live.....such is life 😊
