it seems Dusty's old house on Aubrey Walk is up for sale - so if any of you have £2.5 million to spare, you may want to look into this.

I posted this earlier on the House is Not a Home thead...it can go here as well

Gemma's boyfriend Tom works for the upmarket estate agents Savills and she told me last night that Aubrey Walk ("did you know there's a house with a Dusty plaque on it?") is up for sale. £2,5 million should anyone be interested

Well, I just hope that whoever moves in realises that the plaque is part of the house, and is not to be removed under any circumstances.....or else! 😬😬

When Tove and I were there last year we joked about buying it if it was for sale. We imagined the cool Dusty parties we could throw for our friends! But - what was the price once again? Er.... duh. 🙄

I spoke to my friend's brother earlier and asked if he could give me a small loan - he's rather well off, owns a modest 8 bedroom house, 6 cars and has his own plane - but alas he didn't seem keen!!!

I was totally gutted! 😞😞

It was those Anti-War demonstrations that did me in, Kathy. Kinda embarrassed the Old Man since the family made most of it's money from the War Machine. 🙄🙄

Wouldn't it be fab for LTD-er's to have "time shares" in that house - though I think we'd need the Henley house to truly party on.

Love,
Ro 😊

If you go to the realtor's link you can see some nice photos of the place and the floor plan.

Paging Carole....didn't the house have a different layout when Dusty lived there? When I went to Aubrey Walk a few years ago and met the woman who lived there, I think she said that was the case.

I honestly don't know Nancy, she never invited me to one of her soirees 😊 But this is what she had to say about it at the time....

DUSTY Springfield got the key of the door last weekend —she picked up the keys to her new multi-thousand pound house in Notting Hill Gate, London.

This occasion left her "flummoxed and flabbergasted," which isn't really surprising when you think that for the last six years she's lived like a nomad, tramping from flat to flat and living out of suitcases.

In true Springfield style she has only seen the house once —when she decided to buy it.

"It looks very sad—I'll have to go round this week and really size things up. Houses that have been empty for such a long time look so bare and seedy and there is an awful lot of work to be done on it.

"But it's my first real home and I'm looking forward to getting into it—which probably won't be until next year now because I'll be in America so much.

"I'm no great shakes with a paint brush so I'll be getting contractors in—especially as I want a lot of walls

Dusty the wanderer finds a home at long last third floor of the house into what she calls "a work and madness section." This will be in direct contrast to the sobriety of the rest of the house, which will be tastefully furnished.

"The third floor at the moment has two bedrooms, a bathroom and kitchen. I'm going to knock all the rooms into one and put a piano up there with my old trophies which are lying green and mouldy in a box at the eating recess into it and have it especially designed with loads of expensive labour-saving devices. I'm not a great cook, but I can rustle up steaks and salads and I like nice kitchens. There's a small cloakroom on that floor and then you go upstairs to two bedrooms—which I'm having knocked into one—a main bedroom, which I'm adding a dressing room.

"It's all going to take an awfully long time to get

Would somebody who is not a Dusty fan really buy that place? I mean isn't that part of the charm?

Rob, £2.5mn between 100+ is £25,000 each. hmm. If Dusty bought this in 1968 for £20,000 then it has increased in value by 125 times in 40 years. I think everywhere else has gone up at pretty much the same rate. I remember when one beds in Bayswater were £10,000. Wish it was now.

Do we have 100 people with £25,000 each - we'd have 3 days a year there each! It would be party central! Which Dusty would approve of, of course. Not sure about the swanky neighbours though! The tennis club was not there in the early 70s.
