A new exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery (with some Dusty content) looks like it could be interesting.

It does sound like an interesting exhibition Carole. I am sure there would be a lot there I would remember, being a 60's girl. They were good days.....even remember Cecil Beaton, the photographer!!! Most of the singers to-day I would not know if I fell over one.....still, each to his own!!

WoW! Thanks Carole. 😊 I couldn't have done better myself! David and Dusty side by side just as they should be. Even though we've had a recent Beatles fest it's Dusty that gets top place here despite the 'Beatles to Bowie' title. Fab! 😊

It's also another important sign that, as we know, Dusty is hugely respected and she remains popular and current. I wasn't going to visit this exhibition as a priority but now I will. 😊

I'll definitely make an effort to go to this. Looks like they'll be selling prints and souvenirs of the exhibition, too. I went to the NPG earlier this year and was dissappointed that they didn't have any Dusty postcards in the shop...

Thanks for the fab photo, Carole. So good to see Dusty on the NPG front portico. I remember the original of that photo (the cover of Where Am I Going?) as part of the exhibition in 2002 organised by Fred Perry, along with the photo intended for the cover of Living Without Your Love when it was going to be called Never Trust A Man In A Rented Tuxedo.

I'm going to see the current exhibition on Monday so will be interested to hear other's views on it. Peter x

Yes and how we'd love to see that photo again Peter, I wonder who has it now? I borrowed the NPG photo from Simon btw, not sure who took it.

I have a feeling that it was acquired by the NPG (facilitating its current use on the outside entrance) but I could be wrong. x

Nice to see you here again, Peter! Wish I could join you and the Caroles to see the exhibit. It would be worth it just to see the outside of the NPG with D's huge picture there. I'm so glad to see D "monumentalized" in this way. She deserves it!!!

I've booked for next weekend but said I'd pick the tickets up at the door (I was thinking postal strikes), that probably means I've missed out on the "bookmark"!

thanks for these pics. I think her marker looks quite sad with the autumn leaves around it.

Lovely Pics Carole...

What did you think of the exhibition in general?

2242 Posts

Nice to see Henley in Autumn, its a lovely spot any old time of the year.

I know what you mean about the Autumn leaves,Liz, but Dusty is/was a woman for all seasons and I think its rather touching to see the Marker at different times of the year.

You were lucky to get those photos Carole...a woman told me quite firmly..no photographs!!

I thought overall most of the photos were good and a nice reflection of the 60's. Especially the Beatles and Stones. I would have liked to have seen more Dusty...but I would say that wouldn't !!There was 1 of her standing by The Serpentine in Hyde park which was used for an EP cover.

Overall worth seeing, but I'm not sure it was worth the ticket price of £10..and that was a concession for ladies of a certain age!!

The Turner exhibition at The Tate was worth seeing if you like art.

I quite like the marker with the leaves...The Summer Is Over 😊

As I said to Trek before she went, don't check the accompanying book before you go in! I did and it meant that I already saw all the photos on the wall. I enjoyed the montage displays but I do think that the definitive 60's exhibition is still out there somewhere. There wasn't really enough to look at here. The Serpentine picture was the cover of Dusty in NY but here it was the full shot, not just head and shoulders. I managed to take photos secretly without a flash, some turned out and others didn't. I looked carefully over my shoulder before I did and I was very sneaky about it! This is the full length, not very clear, shot. Earlier this year I found the exact spot this photo was taken with the help of a boatman!

Thanks for the photos, Carole. I'm sorry I didn't make it to the NPG whilst in London visiting my children but we did make it to the Turner and his Contemporaries exhibition which I found fascinating. The Tate Britain did have the Beatles to Bowie book in the shop and I had a good look through it - some nice photographs and our girl features well. Of course my very favourite photograph is in there - of Dusty at the Serpentine - just love that photo and that look! Didn't buy the book - maybe Santa will be helpful, I did drop enough hints!!
