I received this in my dustyspringfield.info email. After some consideration, I've decided to post it, as some fans may be interested in this 15 minute interview with Carole Pope. She talks about her relationship with Dusty at the beginning and the end she gives her thoughts about a Dusty movie project. I think most will agree with what she says about the latter.

Thanks very much. 'She was such a strong, strong woman'. 'She was really a brilliant funny woman and incredibly insecure'. 'I'm glad it happened...' Those are the main things. And 'Don't date alcoholics' - OK I can go with that.

interesting..thanks for posting,N.

Well she certainly isn't shy ..it was nice to hear her take on a (if any) Dusty movie..it SHOULD be about the music...Motown connection, her studio abilities, how big an influence she is today ..and to hear her talk about how strong Dusty was .."powerful woman".

Having recently finished reading AntiDiva, it was interesting to hear her speak about it and Dusty. I learned alot about the music scene in general (especially in Canada) + Carole interactted with many peopel we all have heard of over the years. She has a conversational writing style and I feel like she was pretty (surprisingly) balanced on most of the people and subjects she addressed. I wish her luck finding someone to marry who fits the criteria she laid out...Ro

I never understand what Pope has to say or believe, since she was only with Dusty for 6 months.

What a despicable thing to say about someone you once loved.
I take everything she says with a pinch of salt, she likes to exaggerate for effect.

again easy for everyone linked with her to spin their own stories as she isnt here to defend herself or tell tales on them the supposed friends and so on !!! I do so wish that these people would try to be a bit more loyal and to count themselves lucky that at least they are still here and she who was the "talent"after all sadly is not. I dont care what they all have to say about her she was the one and they should show a bit more class than they sometimes do.
I feel better now for saying that and I wish they would think before they spout some of the rubbish they do.
happy new year!!!
