Brilliant thread. Thanks, Cas.

The first one looks more like Carol Channing (or a drag queen?) to me. Second one captures more of Dusty IMO although isn't it interesting what features cartoonists exaggerate.

The adore the one about her deporation from South Africa. They capture the dress, and even have the bow in the hair. She would probably not like how they drew her legs. LOL. Not to exaggerate, but the overall cartoon brings to mind the image of the Chinese citizen standing before the tank in Tienaman (sp?) Square.

This drawing caused a bit of a stir when it first appeared and I can understand why, at least where Madeline is concerned.

Don't mean to be dense, but basically they're saying Mads was Dusty's flunky? How rude.

BTW I'm noticing hte Gladys Thong book on the floor.

Where did this appear?

It wouldn't happen now, but the sixties were less PC by a long way. I think it was in Melody Maker, one of the music papers anyway.

Around the time that Madeline was in Blue Mink, she did an interview in Titbits Magazine. She said "I remember one guy, a Sunday columnist, writing this weird peice about me being Dusty's maid like we were a pair of kinks. It hurt me. and it hurt Dusty. We thought of sending some manure to his home. But most of these things heal after a time". Not sure which came first, the drawing or the article, either way, they must have been appalled by it.

the only cartoon i have a problem with is the racist one - very offensive towards Madeline; i'm sure neither her nor Dusty were very happy about that. does anyone know when it was published? because if it was after the events that happened in South Africa, i'd have thought the media would know better..

Cas, was that cartoon any time around when she did the roller skating routine in her act? I think she didn't really skate too much, did she?

Sophie, quite right. Good Dustyology question. Context and all.

Karenina, is this your sketch? Seems like it might better go under Fan Art than cartoon. Looks like a Pieta to me...am I right?

The roller skating sketch would have been much earlier, from the mid sixties, when Pat was still a Barnett and a world champion speed skater. I do wonder if Pat gave Dusty lessons for Drury Lane though!

Its a bit s crappy and can be scrapped now. I was compelled to do it by the thing on my shoulder again and I did it in such a hurry it took longer to work out how to upload it. Im usually a perfectionist so I dont know what possessed me to send it. I wanted a religious picture and was stopped by the ecstasy of St Theresa(Teda). if the stripper reappears I might work on something better during half term.

I'm certainly missing something 🤔 Pat probably ran her last marathon about 5 years ago, though she does still run for fun, just not marathons. She has a house full of trophies as her husband is also a champion athlete.

I think Karenina was responding to my question about her drawing.

Maybe Pat was mentioning a race. So she runs races and skates...what else? Guilty of straying off topic...I wonder if we need a Pat Rhodes thread.

My italian friend is coming round on Monday - Ill ask her if Teda is another name for Teresa. Did you know there was an italian sculptor called Pietro Bracci. I suppose Pietro is as commonplace as peter. Thank you for the compliment but I dont think I did Dusty justice, especially the hand, Ive got to work on the hand. I Am capable of much better.

Hi, Karenina

Teda is Italian for Teda... no Teresa involved. Now, if you want to talk St. Teresa Of Avila, I'm your girl - it's my freakin' Confirmation Name. 🙄

My family come from along line of Sculptors. My Grandfather, uncle, and father did it too. Teda could come from Tedadora. It means gift of God. Teda Marie Irene Bracci. Half Italian, German, French. Irish, and English.

Oh well my confirmation name is teresa/theresa (dont think I ever agreed on the spelling) and Im half german half polish but if you two want to fight over it I'll do one for each of you. Teda has the advantage cos I know what she looks like!anyway according to that poem that Dusty liked there is enough love to go around.

....and maybe its whoever lived at Dona 'TERESA' Drive with Dusty. So I will still have to let the face magically appear.

I am getting more of a Rodin for Ro and just hope the face materialises by itself.

I dont think she would want me to draw it that way though so I will stick with the original concept.I am going back to read it properly- they never taught me that at catechism

Back to Dusty 'cartoons'. In this case it was a serious topic as it was what Rolling Stone used on their contents page in April 1999. Not really a flattering image, but poignant just the same.

There was a two page article with pics in Rolling Stone at that time Paula and I'd say every music magazine, daily paper and woman's mag over here (and a lot in the States) ran tribute articles on Dusty. Paul Howes produced a special Commemorative Issue of the Bulletin which collated most of these articles, obits and clippings and its something I still often browse through.

First, from the Washington Blade (I think a gay boy's paper--not that Dusty had or has any gay male fans or anything--probably just a coincidece):

This from an early edition of the Bulletin, along with a comment from the next month's issue. (At least I hope I have the comment with the right piccie.)

I'm sure Tom can answer any questions you have about these.

The Caricature on the cover of the last issue certainly provoked a response! I must admit that I was a little uncertain about using it, and thought that some of you might hate it, but incredibly I had about 20 letters from people saying how much they liked it. I also received just one letter from someone who thought that it was cruel. The only reason I eventually included it was because in my opinion it wasn't cruel at all, but in fact rather affectionate. Had it depicted Dusty in an unflattering light (for example grossly overweight, holding her pension book etc etc.) it would have never have been used. The source of the caricature by the way was Smash Hits, and it was in full colour (I am afraid that I don't know which issue though). Oh yes, we did have one other person who didn't appreciate it - Dusty herself! Pat (Dusty's secretary) tells me that Dusty "hated it", but I'm not sure if that was a "how dare he print it!" or whether it was just the typical reaction of most people who see caricatures of themselves. Anyway, this issue we're back to a nice photograph - I'm sure you've all been longing for a Des O'Connor, haven't you!

I can understand why Dusty didn't like it..as the article states..most people don't really like caricatures of themselves since they focus on certain parts and accentuate them..but others usually can see the fun more than the person its of.
