The Pet Shop Boys (Chris Lowe - CL and Neil Tennant - NT) are interviewed in the Observer's music magazine supplement, published yesterday. Neil talks about what he has learned from his great teacher, Dusty. They are asked 'Who are the greatest British men and women?' Beatles, Stones, Bowie, Gilbert & Sullivan and militant gay rights activist Peter Tatchell come up. Then we get to Dusty.

CL: Dusty Springfield.

NT: Dusty Springfield. Thank you. Totally. All the singers I have been influenced by, with the exception of Bowie, were women. Nina Simone, Billie Holiday, Dusty Springfield are probably my favourite singers. Dusty, I like that breathy thing. I also like the fact that Dusty used to double-track her records and I like my sound double-tracked. From her, I learned things that had never entered my head; how you arrange a song, how you change the melody at every verse and every chorus, how you give it a climax. There's a song on our new album called 'Pandemonium' where, at the end, I finally do a Dusty Springfield. On the last chorus I change the melody and take it up and I thought 'Wow, I've never done that before - I'm trying to be be Dusty!'

I agree, not fully forgiven though, of all the atrocious choices why they had to pick that silly tart I`ll never know

Thanks very much, Trek

I enjoyed this including what Lorraine Kelly said about Dusty too. She really rates her. Of course she does!

Thanks for this 🙏 I was stunned too that they chose that Gaga person to sing Dusty's part at the Brits. I'd never heard of her until then and after THAT performance i'm sure i won't care if i never hear her again.
They could've at least tried to find someone who could do the song justice, although trying to find a replacement for Dusty is nigh on impossible.

Thanks for that trek, so I have forgiven them a little bit more now, but not completely lol, but why oh why does duffy have to get her face into everything Dusty? SHES NOTHING LIKE HER FOR GRIEFS SAKE, its driving me mad, in every single interview with anybody lately duffy appears with all her comparisons AND ITS P***ING ME OFF. Phew, thats better. I wish i could do concerts, id like to go and see them, but not if that slapper with the leather knickers is with them thats for sure
