After Dusty Day and the auction that's part of it, I wondered if the members with items that actually belonged to Dusty would be willing to share the history by pictures or just how the item came into their possession. It would be lovely to be able to hear about and possibly see your pictures.

well a few years back on a Dusty day I was able to win one of Dustys leather jackets and the lovely Pat handed it to me.

lots of items were very expensive and so went to people with bigger bank rolls and went abroad with people who no longer post on ltd, but there are lots with our regulars and they are all in the archives here somewhere. 😊

One of the pairs Dusty had actually worn, and the other two belonged to her. Think I paid £130, which I thought was a bargain.

See above:-

Re Bears: Tried to load new pics with their new tarty pink ribbons but unable so old posts. They now live on my bed with "Dusty" and "Angus". Dusty originated from California, given to me by a friend when we visited LA.

Angus belonged to my mum's great- aunt. She used to pass a toy shop every day on way to work and would see him sitting in the window looking very lonely. Being at this time nearing retirement she eventually went into the shop to purchase him. She told the assistance that she was buying it for herself and that she felt a bit guilty and she hoped that it was OK.

Isn't it strange that both these stories have a slight connection with our Dusty.

I'd rather see the world the way it used to be.....

At the Sotherby's auction, I acquired 5 pairs of shoes and my friend Michael had another 5. Over the years since then, I've given a pair to the DD auction, swapped a pair with Pat and done a deal with Nancy for the small canvas boots. So I still have a pair of suede black boots (Dame Edna), purple shoes (Reputation era on a few vids), pink and purple pair (no footage but worn many times as they have feet marks in them!) and white canvas boots from one of the Very Fine Love photo shoots. I'm sticking with these now 😊 Cas also gave me a pair of eyelashes that sit in a pretty pink box.

Dusty took this picture, which I won on eBay, of her cat Nicholas. It's not a repro, it's the original that Pat gave to a cat charity magazine that was doing a story on Dusty's love of cats:

This is my Dusty treasure from Dusty Day 2014. Nancy won the bid for me. It is a black Cerruti suit. I have not been able to find any info on it. Do any of you know of any pictures where Dusty is wearing the suit. Or maybe you have seen it on her in person. Would love to know a little more about it. E mailed Simon but he never got back to me. Anyway, I love having this Dusty Treasure.

Jeffery-I have looked at those suits very closely, and I did not see a pocket next to the lapel like the Cerruti jacket. But the suits from Dame Edna and Pet Shop Boys do look similar. T think the Dame Edna suit had some kind of blue sequins on the lapel. What do u think?

I think if it were one of those suits, it would have already been identified as such.

But, I'm so glad you won the suit, Cecelia. 🏆 You must be tiny, if you got the jacket on!

Hi James-well we thought we would get some type of maniquin to put the suit on. Then display it in the main part of the house. But since we have gas heat, I would have to keep it covered. I am afraid that might make it dirty. So now we have to find a maniquin. That's what we have in mind so far.

Just a thought re the suit.I don't think it was a "stage" costume, possibly a daytime suit for meetings, press interviews etc. Just an everyday smart outfit which Dusty would dress up with scarves brooches as she always seemed to do. We all know that black was one of her colours in the '90s.

Pat-I think you are right. Don't think it was a stage outfit cause I haven't been able to find her wearing it in any pictures. I hadn't thought about interviews and press conferences, though. I would like to think it is from 90's cause I would like to have something of Dusty's from the 90's. But when I hold the tape measure across the waste, it is only 13 inches. Would Dusty have been that small in the 90's? I mean those pants are really tiny.

Re: Dusty treasures

At one point (when she was younger?) Dusty's waist was 27". But this suit seems from later years. One theory is that she might have purchased the suit when she was ill ☹️ I know regarding the jacket I got at auction a few years ago, someone reminded me that Dusty had said one advantage of her illness was that 'now i can get into my Armani.' The other thing we have to keep in mind with any/all Dusty items that we can't specifically place to a certain date/time is that she was a shopaholic. Dusty bought a lot of things, and didn't necessarily use them all regularly.

I don't mean to be a "Debbie Downer," just point out that there are many possibilities. It doesn't diminish the value that these treasures have to us. And thank you especially to Pat for donating all these wonderful items year after year for auction on Dusty Day.

Regarding our shopaholic friend, I believe she would buy the same clothes in several sizes (and colours). Ever hopeful she would make the smallest no doubt. Dusty admitted that weight was always a problem. Heigh-ho we'll never know, but enjoy it Cecilia.

As Simon reminded us at DD there is very little left in Pat's store of Dusty's personal belongings. A big thank you to her for putting them into the auctions.
