Dusty..at the BBC radio programme (#p107886)

by Brian » Mon Dec 10, 2012 10:57 pm

I've just noticed BBC Radio 2 have 'Dusty at the BBC' presented by Johnnie Walker from 10pm - 11pm on Thursday 20th December - next week!

Very cool. I wonder if it will be excerpts of her radio performances, her own TV series, or her appearances on other BBC programmes? Perhaps a mixture of these and more.

Thanks, Brian. I hope that iPlayer will have this on it afterwards. I haven't used iPlayer for radio-related content, just television programming.

Thanks Brian. 😊 😊

According to Radio Times It combines BBC archive interviews and performances. "Johnnie Walker constructs a portrait of perhaps the rock and pop era's greatest of all female singers 🟢 who died in 1999, aged 59." 😊

There's no "perhaps" about it 😊 Good that there's something Dusty related on the BBC over the Christmas period (not forgetting Jools Holland too), thanks for the heads up Brian.

Radio 2 are running a great trailer for the programme - I've heard it three times today already!

They refer to Dusty as 'one of the greatest singers this country has ever had' and the trailer includes several snippets from Dusty's singles.

I wonder if there will be anything "exclusive" or previously unheard on this special, and if there are any upcoming Dusty compilations in the wings?

An enjoyable hour that went way too quickly (they always do when Dusty is involved!) Mainly complete live recordings were played, nothing very rare unfortunately but great to hear House of the Rising Sun, Tossin' and Turnin' and To Love Somebody again on radio. What is always lovely is hearing Dusty speak, one of the things she said in interview was that in the early days agent Bunny Lewis had said he didn't think she would make it in the business as she was "too intelligent", well she made it, and being intelligent makes for a good interviewee 🤔 I kept on thinking I was listening to a new interview snippet and then I would recognise the next sentence. I haven't listened to it again yet but I was unsure of the woman's voice at the end who talked of interviewing Dusty, was it Dawn French?

Was it really an hour?..it went so quickly. Very enjoyable with a few surprises re - the songs played - 'Dear John for instance.

One thing that made me think - her version of 'To love somebody' really was superb, and if only record companies re-issued or had the gumption to promote 'class' like this, the charts might not be filled with the repetitive rubbish that is today's 'music'.

The Interviewee at the end was Jenni Murray from BBC Radio's Woman Hour. The extract was from a programme Called Dusty At 70, Wish I Could post the link Carole but unable to. 🙄 More good Radio with Annie Randall as one of the guests.

Still if anyone wants to listen to the programme Type in BBC-Radio 4 Woman's Hour Dusty At 70 , and click on "listen to this item", and your p.c will download it. You might need additional software (like RealPlayer) to play the link, but your p.c should guide you.

My first thought was that it was Jenni Murray Darren but I didn't totally recognise her voice. I think if I listened again, I would have got it. I heard the Dusty at 70 Annie interview at the time (think I have it transferred somewhere), it was a really good one, in fact I was with Annie in Manchester when she came up to record it.

it was a good prog and just so fab to hear her speaking. 🎧

I think she had such a lovely speaking voice and its always so good to hear her when she was interviewed.

we could do with another hr as it just skipped so much.

I feel as if Christmas with Dusty is well and truly here now.

thanks to the BBC radio 2 who play her songs such a lot,they obviously love her too 🌟

Ta for the link.. 😊

I missed the first fifteen minutes, so, I'll catch up later.

Really enjoyed the programme, it's always good to hear Dusty speaking and the music was great, of course. 🎵

It was good to hear 'I'd Rather Leave While I'm In Love' on the radio, but I was a bit peeved that it was cut short.

Anyway, thanks to Radio 2, Christmas came early for Dusty fans this year. 🙌🙌

I agree with all the comment obviously, especially the ones about her speaking....it's always a delight listen to her talking.

I can remember listening to the Jenni Murray prog .

So nice to hear To Love Somebody.

Just putting this prog onto a CD

I, too, loved knowing that I was listening to it from San Francisco at the same time as so many of you. That hour went by much too fast! Like Amanda, I really enjoy hearing Dusty's thoughts on things, so the interviews were great. Hearing "To Love Somebody" and "House of the Rising Sun" were definite musical highlights for me.

So great to hear "House of the Rising Sun" included in the presentation. I do hope that one is earmarked for inclusion on a future Dusty release. It was silly for the Beeb to have omitted it from the not-so-complete BBC Sessions.
