Dusty in Memphis 45 rpm 200 gram link (#p120360)

by mikeh69 » Wed May 08, 2013 11:33 pm

Here is my link to my vinyl rip of the new Dusty in Memphis LP I put it up on facebook but I don't think I did here. It was a two record set and was 50.00.

They still sell them at http://store.acousticsounds.com/d/73767 ... nyl_Record
(http://store.acousticsounds.com/d/73767/Dusty_Springfield-Dusty_In_Memphis-45_RPM_Vinyl_Record)

It sounds like no other version. I bought the day it was released I believe 2011. I hope you enjoy it.

Thank you there is different ways to download these files the player in archive.org doesn't do much justice to the way the vinyl sounds. Hit the VBR M3U button to stream it. Or you download each song by right clicking on the wave file and hit save as and put the songs on desktop and then into a new folder. The archive.org player does sound good in headphones but it's all similar.

The mix on this version of DIM definately puts her voice more out-front than the CD's I've got. I like these much better. Thanks for uploading.

Many thanks for sharing this. It sounds so warm and fresh, like just-baked bread... Mother's Pride, perhaps? 🙏 It's a shame the CD reissues couldn't capture this depth of audio bliss...

I listened to this at work yesterday but couldn't comment. How clear Dusty sounds! (I've always felt her voice sounded cloudy on other releases- ESPECIALLY the 1999 deluxe reissue). Listen to Just a Little Lovin with headphones...its a very noticeable difference. Thanks so much!!!

Wow 954 downloads of my rip. I hope you all enjoyed it. I know it was years ago and it's still up for anyone who hasn't heard it. But it's the best version of it that I have ever heard or will hear. It was done by a major professional mastering engineer who had the original masters and did on a 45 RPM 2 record set where you can hear all the details. It was also released on a SACD which I acquired also of the same mastering just on a CD rather than LP. They sound both incredible. 🙏
