@%*@%* and more swear words! I go on holiday on the 1st March. Just typical, I always say if I book a holiday, something Dusty-ish happens that I miss and I'm right again. I know I can record it and have seen it all before but it's not quite the same.....and I can't wait for the sunshine 😊

I was in the same place until a few months ago, Joe. A friend told me about a service called TunnelBear that provides access to everything the BBC, ITV, etc offer. I get unlimited usage for about $50/year. It's so easy and I watch British TV every day with it. It's been wonderful. I just wish I would have had it during the Olympics. Anyway, here's the site:

That was what I'd call a perfect night of tv. 😊

I know we've seen most of it before, but after watching the current crop of so called 'singers' churning out their mechanical non-songs, it was a treat to watch a real singer perform beautiful songs.

While watching Dusty sing 'My Lagan love' it crossed my mind if only someone could do what Terry Wogan did with Eva Cassidy, this could become such a big hit....how about it BBC DJ ??

Agree with all previous comments. 😊

Dusty was a one off, and last nights terrific Dusty Marathon confirmed this. 🤔

Needless to say, she was a fantastic singer who sang some beautiful songs, but on her BBC shows she also came over as having natural charisma, a sense of humour ( mostly self deprecating) and a vulnerability that was so attractive and intriguing for her many fans. ❤️

Dusty had the mysterious x- factor long before that programme was thought of.

Thanks to BBC 4 for recognising this, and commemorating her death, an unbelievable 14 years ago.

Maggie knows some way to trick your computer into thinking it's in the UK, and will receive the broadcasts.

She posted it for me on a previous broadcast. Ask her. 🙄

I can't figure it out either. Probably too simple, and I haven't the time to experiment.

They are programs that allow you to connect to a VPN - Virtual Private Network - which makes it look like you are in whatever country you set the program to access. They do take up memory, but not much. Basic cable would be a problem however for streaming video - you usually need high speed cable to get video to run. But if you can watch YouTube videos it might work.

The Dusty at the BBC special was sublime. Great to see several of the duet clips that were sadly omitted from her Live at the BBC DVD, including those from her series as well as the 1972 Tom Jones duet "You Got What It Takes". The Beeb really ought to issue some of these specials on DVD. Shame about "Sweet Lover No More" being omitted from the one special.

Jeffery and others here in the U.S. wanting to watch the BBC, ITV, etc.,

Tunnelbear is a godsend. As I mentioned earlier in this thread, for about $50/year, you get unlimited access to British TV. It more than pays for itself if you like watching British TV and seeing programs before they hit the States like Downton Abbey, Call the Midwife, etc. I do think you'd need high-speed internet, but you can check the FAQ page on the tunnelbear site. You'll never miss any Dusty shows on the BBC ever again.

Charlotte I don't remember if I got that message or not. I'm one of those people who plows ahead and does it anyway  I'm pretty good at fixing my own computer problems and I have had a few  (I've probably doomed myself now!) The only thing I encountered with the program was a lot of pop up ads after I downloaded it but there is a "button" to disconnect it when not in use so I did that. Tonight I watched another part of the Dusty series and I just connected it again and it worked again. There is a pay version of the program for about $30.00 and you don't have the pop ups but I will just use this freebie for now. I have a strong anti-virus program always running and lots of security measures in place so I don't worry too much but if you don't feel comfortable downloading it then you probably shouldn't. To Jeffery...it does say high speed internet connection is required for streaming the videos. Tonight it told me that my connection wasn't fast enough(  ) so I just reloaded it and it worked fine. I only do what is comfortable for me though so it's best to make your own call when trying new things. Good luck.

I've put a piece of software on mine and Cas's website called RankTraker and what it does is tell me the best keywords to use in my content on the website.

As soon as the show finished, I was receiving dozens of emails telling me which keywords to use in accordance with what all these people were putting in the search engines as a result of watching the show. And interestingly enough the keywords most used was Dusty in South Africa.

There were others but that was the predominant one, and I am still getting some coming through now. Not many but it proves it put Dusty back in the public eye.
