Thanks for the link, Matt! 🙏

Here's what the article says:

The spirit of the beehive

Dusty Springfield

'Queen Beehive' Dusty Springfield did more for vertiginous hair than any singer before or since. Like a giant lacquered pineapple, her beehive was as much her trademark as her voice: even today, it has only been matched in the excess stakes by the one worn by Coronation Street's Bet Lynch. A constant throughout the Sixties, to some, the Springfield 'do has become nothing less than a metaphor for the woman herself: soft and fluffy on the surface, rock hard beneath.

Though, to describe her as "rock hard"...? I don't know....

I feel she was totally the opposite of 'rock hard' on the inside. I've never heard that said of her before, he just made it up 🙄

Carole,
I think it's time for one of your famous "letters to the editor!"

"rock hard"? NO
"a giant lacquered pineapple"? NO
"Bet Lynch"??? HELL NO!

Oh my...

Well, I'm sticking with what I told Dusty after seeing a bunch of pictures of her from the 60's "It looks like you used sooo much aquanet, you blew a hole in the ozone layer!" which Dusty turned around and armed herself with, for interviews "I think I used so much hairspray, I blew a hole in the ozone layer!"

Cheers
