In DWD it talks about Dusty mentioning about burning her hands as a child. Does anyone know the original source of information. Was it from a friend/friends/relatives/VW or PV/or media?

As Dusty, alledgely, had flings with some less salubrious characters didnt any of them try to sell the tales to the tabloids like current stars and footballers flings constantly do or did they all ,understandly, fall under her spell.

if this creates controversy I'm leaving the country! Ms P you got any space in your box I'm quite tiny.

She might have had flings with less salubrious people, but at least they have deceny and dignity not to sell off their story like some of today's wannabe celebrities

The authors of DWD state several friends as sources in their foreword. But where this particular piece of info came from, no idea.

The first time I remember reading it was in an interview that Dusty did with Jean Rook in the Daily Express in 1985. Rather that take the quote out of context, I'll type out the whole interview sometime soon.

Looking forward to that, Carole. Context is important, critical even at times.
