Every song recorded by Dusty? (#p176503)

by lemoncurd » Tue Sep 08, 2015 2:38 pm

I was reading Paul Howe's book the other day and thought it would be nice to have some sort of "check list" for every song Dusty recorded. In chronological order, and with every mix and oddity listed, plus where one can find it on vinyl or CD. Has this been done? If not, I might give it a try myself. I'm sure I would miss a lot of stuff, but I could start and then anyone could add things to the list here in this thread?

There's a very nice page at <http://jazzdiscography.com> (<http://jazzdiscography.com>), listing all her studio sessions, but I'd like something a little slicker and easier on the eye. 😊

Doesn't Paul's book do that, though? It lists every song recorded, plus it's first release on any form. It's not in chronological order, per se, but it's still fairly thorough.

You mean something digital, lemoncurd? Very nice idea, and I wouldn't mind including it on our website if you are willing to make the effort!

But... since the information (if not all, then most of it) would be sourced from Paul's book, I guess there'd be a copyright issue? The initiative would have to come from him, I'd say.

Years ago I started a dbase-file of everything I had, but then I didn't keep it up-to-date....

You may download it here, the file's called db1 (open with Access)

The word-doc 'Dusty verzameling' IS up-to-date.

There would only be a copyright issue if you copied his text without attribution. The raw data is simply fact, and usable by anyone.

I don't know, Maggie. At the end of the day, it's Paul Howes who's compiled the "raw data". I just don't want to encourage anyone to do anything which in the end might get them into trouble.

As long as they only use the dates and facts, and not opinion or comment without attribution, there can be no copyright claim.

What Paul has done, and bless the lad, is simply compile a chronology of Dusty's career. But the events listed are not his invention, nor are they anyone's intellectual property. They are just facts, and facts cannot be copyrighted.

Trust me - this is a central issue for any journalist, and it was drilled into us from the first day of newswriting class.

I'd be interested in such an index particularly as it relates to mixes.

I've recently purchased the 2004 "Classics & Collectibles" CD and was surprised to hear the different mixes on "In the Middle of Nowhere" and "Little By Little". I gather Little By Little on this CD is the hit 45 mix and that for some reason the 2006 "Complete A Sides & B Sides 1963-1970" CD uses a different mix, apparently a fold down, without some of the backing vocals found on the 45 mix.

"In the Middle of Nowhere" on the 2004 CD also has some very clear upfront horn parts that are buried and reverbed in the mix on the 2006 CD. I'd like to know if either of them is the 45 mix.
