Wendy...I have to agree with Cas, ...your latest "red Dusty" is gorgeous and well done and could be my favorite of allso far. 😊

Thank you Paula you're too too generous. I'ts on my wall currently, but my friend comes tonight, and I'm going to let her take it home and get her husband to take a decent picture, because I think it looks much better without all those enhancements from Picasa, the eyes are too dark on there, but it was the best I could do. Anyway if it turns out any better I'll put it on here, if not I won't bother. I actually like a nice soft look round her eyes. But I am pleased with it anyway, it was a kind of experiment, and it looks like Dusty's face coming out of a red mist.

That is a brilliant likeness, Wendy! Could it be your talent is improving with each effort? Once again the detail is amazing.

Hard to say really Nancy, I think I was probably better when I was younger, but as I gave all my drawings away and most of them are in Australia, and lots are with people I haven't seen for years, I'm never likely to be able to compare, so it's hard to say, but I think I have become more adventurous and innovative, and I've certainly upped my quota from say two a year to two a month. That can only be good. I've got into better habits. I've always been red hot on getting the detail in.

Thats quite a striking portrait Wendy, I too think you are improving with each attempt.This one has a sort of 'faraway' look...well I know what I mean. 😊

Thanks everyone - I do think Clare can take a lot of the credit here for selecting a really nice picture of Dusty.

Thanks Clare - we've always suspected you had impeccable taste, now you've confirmed it.
