Worked a little Photoshop magic on this picture as the black & white exposure was very harsh on her makeup.

Still think she looks sadder than anyone holding a kitten as cute as that has a right to be!

See I gotta live up to my signature occasionally!

Just for fun of course - the original for comparison.

Good improvement Tim. Yes Dusty looks very wistful and lost in thought, almost unaware of the kitty. I like the photo but I can see why others may not.

good job Tim...I am still always amazed at how one person can look so different at various times.

Me too, Paula. I'd think I'd be used to it after all these years, but I just can't reconcile all the faces.

Nice job, Timmeh. I think Dusty would be pleased with the touch up! I wonder if she would direct you to go further, like crop out that big buldge in her sleeve.

Thanx - helps if its your day job of course. Retouching is easy - designing from nothing is the hard part.

Re the bulging sleeve- I hadn't noticed it till you said Nancy ... Now I can't take my eyes of it....I may try and slim it down a bit.

(Bette Davis voice spoken in italics) JEEZ.. I just hope you're not THIS critical of MY wardrobe when you drop in on ME...

Need the program at work to morph her arm smaller. So here's a crop that would make an avatar...I re sepia'd it too. Top of LH shoulder a bit dodgy but prob wouldn't show smaller.

That is a nice improvement to the original photo Tim, I prefer your version, so thank you.
