While on the topic of serial numbers does anyone know what the prefix 'BF' stood for on Philips singles in the 1960s?

e.g. Stay Awhile (Philips BF 1313)

I could be completely wrong, but I have a hunch that this might just mean they were mono rather than stereo. The catalogue numbers of Dusty's Philips albums start with BL if they're mono, and SBL if they're stereo.

But I'm not convinced I'm right here!

well I had all the original lps and then gradually they vanished but I have recently bought a turntable and so have rebought some of Dusty's lps and yes Henry the "reputation" album does have the words printed inside so of course I sing along to those!! good job I live on my own!! I won't be replenishing my vinyl to a great extent but I love having these back as they are so good to read etc, much better than cds where my old eyes struggle to read the info. I just wish I had the ones I bought in the first place. 😊

Many thanks folks - having all lyrics on the LP sleeve must have been fairly rare in the early seventies - I think Reputation vinyl LP had the lyrics also - would have to confirm by checking out the "vinyls' box" in the attic??

I just noticed that 'Ev'rything's Coming Up Dusty' is the only album of hers that doesn't follow that convention, Rosie. For some reason it's RBL for mono and SRBL for stereo.

And how funny is it that I just noticed that whilst we're discussing Cameo, I had changed my avatar to match it?
