We did this yonks ago, but maybe it'll be the lovelier the second time around?... 😊

You are arranging a candlelit Supper ala Hyacinth Bouquet.

Your main guest will be Dusty Springfield.. Who will be your other THREE guests?...

Burt Bacharach because I would just want him in my house, Carole King and Ellie Greenwich (though like Dusty, she's no longer with us). I'd love to talk about those days in the Brill Building.

My first thought is to hold this circa 1980. The first two guests I came up with were Lydia Lunch and Marianne Faithfull, which would probably end up with something more like Fellini than that Bucket woman, resulting in lots of nakedness and abuse of various substances. In other words, a lot of fun for teenaged Tom, but I should probably have my third guest be an EMT.

Ok, let's try this again. In the parallel universe where I'm having dinner parties with Dusty Springfield as a guest, she married Burt Bacharach in the mid-70s, so he's her date and I can cheat and include him and still have three guests.

So, let's keep Marianne. There's still a risk of her falling asleep in the soup, but Lydia won't be around and marriage to Burt might have mellowed Dusty out so things won't get so out of hand.

Next guest would be Sandie Shaw, someone else from the old days who did a good job of moving into the 80s.

Finally, Elvis Costello and if all goes well, we'll end up with "God Give Me Strength" being written 15 years earlier than it was and Dusty recording it.

On the other hand, while I would love to hear Elvis and Burt discussing music, that first party sounded like more fun.

Firstly I'd have tried to invite someone lovely, warm, funny and fabulously attractive along in the hope that Dusty would have hit it off with them and found somebody to be happy with ❤️. Old romantic, me 😊. Obviously my own lovely lady would be there already. For the other two guests, I'd have two people I think Dusty would've really liked to meet (and we would too): Peggy Lee, and some fabulous Hollywood icon like Bette Davis. Dust loved her old movies after all 😊🌟

Very thoughtful Grace, like the choices you made.

I would've just so wanted Dusty's happiness, and to give her interesting company she'd be comfortable and relaxed in 🥰 Wouldve done anything to put her at her ease. PS. Cas, if you're on there, find me on FB! (Sideline, but hopefully allowable! 🤗).

I cant break the habit of a lifetime, so as usual, the other three guests would have to be me, me, and me.

Neil 😊

very good Neil 😊

I did this last time but cant remember who I said then but I have just realised that if Dusty was at the house and I didnt invite Cas, Wendy and Karen, then my life wouldnt be worth living 😞

It's a difficult decision, but my choice would be:

- 1) Burt Bacharach
- 2) Norma Tanega
- 3) Jerry Wexler

So basically, you just want her all to yourself 😏

😏 Neil, that's called a "date." 😊

For supper I'd invite My friend Jon and his wife Carmen (who are musicians), and my former girlfriend (1967) because she too was a Dusty fan.

I'd invite Karen Carpenter, Dorothy Squires and possibly Rosemary Clooney. (if they were all still with us, of course 🙄)
