Nancy posted this on Facebook as well. I think it's a lovely thing to do, film it for us all to share. As Kathy says on another thread, what a shame it wasn't done a day later when our Christmas flowers would have been placed there. Thanks Graeme, whoever you are

Hard to imagine sunny times!

Nice to see the marker at this time of the year.

I wonder if this kind person has been getting to work ok in Henley as they have had heavy snow too. I hope they will post another one when the "white stuff" finally goes.

I've been thinking about this person, too, Liz.. I was wondering where this office is... Obviously there are no offices directly behind the Marker, those are the Alms houses.

There are none directly in front, cos thats the church and gardens.

There are no buildings to the right of the Marker as you look at it.

So he must work somewhere on Hart street opposite the Marker, as you look at it, on the left.

(My God I'm soundin' like that Woman in Fatal Attraction) 😬 😊

Where can he be?..(Can't you tell this snow and all it works is keeping me in!?).. 😬 😊

yes its worrying that we are all falling apart in this snow, still maybe its better than turning to the drink!!!

although looking at some of the posts on here maybe some of us already have!!

there were shops opposite that entrance I thought but I suppose there may be offices up above some of them.

I loved Henley, wouldnt mind a little pad there?

Since I'm not as affected by the snow as you ladies seem to be 😊 I looked for facts.

Mystery man's name is Graeme Ratten, and he's the publisher of Opportunities magazine & website <http://www.opportunities.co.uk/> according to his own presentation on YouTube. Maybe we could pay him a visit in April? The video's so nicely and kindly done.

Most lovely video. It's good to see the marker, though one can't actually be there. 😊 Thanks Graeme!

   Well, I wasn't expecting to visit Dusty's marker this morning. I'm without words! How do I express this sense of comfort, peace, and relief. Thank you, Graeme, and Will.
