Does anyone recall in an interview later in life when DUSTY said something like she wasn't in a relationship anymore cuz she found she just rolled over people....like she was too much for them....?

Thanks.

It's all in the punctuation isn't it.. it could so easily have been...

'I just rolled over, people..'

A few things...

She was typically involved or interested in more than one person at a time, plus ex's often remained, as concerned friends...

Alcoholism makes anybody a huge handful, and she was more taxing at different periods of her life than others - depending on what stage her alcoholism was in, and what stage her career was in.

When I met her, she really had nothing left, so, it was all a tremendous amount of effort going into her....with little to give back. Totally exhausting.

I've said it before and I'll say it again, it would have been easier if I had carried her on my back up mount everest.... re: her recovery.

Of course, I imagine that the peeps that just partied with her - prior to the state I found her in, have a whole different take....

There are givers and there are takers in the world - and at different times of her life, she gave more and others, she needed more.

But so, between being easily swayed by other people while in a relationship -- The effects all the years of drinking had on her -- and the demands of her career...is what she was getting at....it was too much for her to deal with - let alone, other people.

Another spooky moment - a song entered my head from nowhere. Asked my other half if he knew it , he was able to add a few more lyrics. I dont even want to go to the party. Finally worked out by looking up lyrics that it was a Carol King song and Dusty sang it. I wanna stay here - dont know where that came from or why. and im not drunk tonight honest.

I like to think that whoever Dusty was in a relationship with, that there were more good times than bad times, maybe it's time to focus more on those good times, and lets leave the bad times buried and forgotten in DWD.....that book has caused more trouble than it's worth.

I think I found the quote that Nancy is talking about the other day but I now have to remember where it was! What she actually said was that she "ran" over people. I'll take a look again tomorrow.

Okay, so Dusty left a lot of 'roadkill' in her path - was she any different than many of us alcoholics? No! In fact, she was just another arch-typical drunk - flit from one 'thing' to another - go home with people we don't know at all - wake up in the morning wondering whom was in bed with us - and WHY? - desperately trying to put together whatever pieces we remember from the night before.

Recovery is much easier. All you have to do is keep the cork in the bottle and go to meetings - lots of meetings - 90 meetings in 90 days is just the start. It's day in and day out - year in and year out. Whatever pieces which are left to put back together, we do that ourselves if we work an honest program - we and our fellow A.A. members give each other support - but, it's the drunk who has to do most all the work. Somedays everything goes well - other days all you want to do is get stinking drunk. That's just life in early recovery.

Dusty was anything but unique. Her story was far less ugly than many others I've heard. And, yes, I did hear Dusty speak at A.A. meetings and vice versa. But, give the girl some credit, only she could get herself sober. And, she finally did after a few false starts. She was not a dish rag - she worked her program - all 12 Steps of it. And, Dusty inspired many an AA newcomer to do the same.

That's about it.

Love,
Ro

Thanks for the insights, Ro. I'm so glad to hear that Dusty inspired others. It doesn't surprise me but it makes me proud. Good on all of you who've worked (and work) the program.

Re the quote--it seemed to me something she said later in life about why she wasn't in relationships anymore. But I know Carole will find it.

The quote "I don't know, I just ran over people" was in the Mick Brown Telegraph insightful article from AVFL time. It more or less followed on from her saying: - "Please if you looked at me nicely, take me home. You like me! You fancy me! Wow! You know, can I kiss your boots? I was so innocent, and so insecure and so over-awed. Coming from having no confidence in myself on any level. That somebody could fancy me...They could be the rottenest people in the world, and some of them were. I made some dreadful mistakes, and I've never been allowed to forget them. Some of them were genuinely rotten people; there was nothing good about them, nothing nurturing. I didn't know how to sustain a relationship - didn't know what a relationship was."

I must be losing my touch maybe cos Im not drinking so much but all I am getting are groans or are they moans. I asked for signs again at the club but I just got something that I thought was amusing. One of the kids said he got a bearded dragon. i asked if he could get anymore but he said no they cant have any mates because they get too 'aggressive'. Big word for a little chap.
