In The Winter.. (#p47)

by Carole R. » Thu Dec 17, 2009 7:56 pm

Don't know if you heard the original by the Writer, Janis Ian?.. Anyway here it is:

Do you think Dusty did it justice?(Ask a silly question!)

I recall reading that Janis will no longer sing the song after hearing Dusty's version? she said she felt she could "no longer do the piece justice". That's pretty steep praise.

listening to Dusty's version, you can practically picture the layout of the house she's languishing in. you can really hear her dying inside as she runs into her old love again, frontin' (as we'd say)...brushing off the emptiness of her existence and pretending everything's alright. I love listening to Dusty sing, but this is painful. Almost too much to listen to... 😞 Janis's version is beautiful. Dusty's is heartbreaking.

Yes that was an amazing thing for Janis to say about her own song , but like we all feel Dusty put' so much of her own emotion into this, she really mean't it.
