Dusty Janeway asked this on another thread:

Is Helen Mirren also a fan? What with all the Dusty songs in Prime Suspect and all, I wondering if there is some kind of connection? Plus I think I read somewhere about Mirren attending a Dusty concert?!?

I'm sure she is Nancy, when she started dancing to 'Stay awhile' it bought a smile to my face 😊!

Helen comes from close to me also, the Essex town of Westcliff, where she was Convent educated....(a Dusty connection there!)

I also think the movie 'The Long Good Friday' is a great one too!.....here's a couple of scenes.....

Here's a really good, in depth review of Helen Mirren as both Jane and Elizabeth.

I finally got to see the last two episodes of Prime Suspect on TV this weekend, and heard Jane Tennison play Stay awhile and In the middle of nowhere. Sooo niiiiice! 🙏

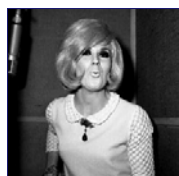

She also got a nice line with "I'm not the queen". Must have been a little good-bye present from the writers. 😊

There are many episodes over several series (years) but will see what we can do. Will be sure to include the "Stay Awhile" one. Your patience will be rewarded as its in a queue of items to be converted.

Is she a Dusty fan? I'd say she most probably is and the songs in Prime Suspect were her choice. Helen was in Manchester on Saturday doing a book signing and as much as I wanted to go, it wasn't possible. Anyway, in tonight's Evening News there is an interview and she was talking about how her career began in the town.

"It was my first professional job so I've got very fond memories of that time. Not least because of the B&B I stayed in!

They were real theatrical digs - you know, no heat in the bedroom, putting a penny in for the fire. I thought it was incredibly glamorous because I'd heard that Dusty Springfield had stayed there the year before!"

I guess you can put up with anything if you're following in Dusty's footsteps 😊

Too bad they didn't tear up the bedsheets Dusty slept on into one inch squares and sell them, as they did the Beatles sheets.

Dame Helen sounds like she has a wicked sense of humour. And such a classy lady, of course she'd be a Dusty fan!

Oops, I forgot about this promise. I'll have to see what I can do. A bit busy at the moment, but will start to do something on this soon. I'll be in touch with people about it in the next little while.
