Can anyone enlighten me what the Dusty/Phil Ramone connection is? I've looked through the indexes in every book, but can't come up with anything. Is there anything more specific than that they were both artists and have passed on...?

(Btw, Phoebe is Phoebe Snow. Sue was her manager.)

According to a post put up by Sweetbaby on March 1:

Dusty's fans will be especially familiar with Ramone as the engineer on Look of Love: he'd recall of that session - We did that in a small studio in London that was owned by Philips Records. Dusty normally never recorded outside of the vocal booth. In this case, however, she just had a little isolation screen there, which added to the song's taut style and drama...The sax solo was done live by an English studio musician. And what you hear is Burt's interpretation of the song. He half-sang what he wanted to Dusty in a breathy voice to convey his vision.
