From Andrew on Dustyville:

There's a Dusty mention below, so read on. Bid if you dare!!! Andrew

Be the Pet Shop Boys' West End girl (or boy)

via Gay UK News by editor@gayuknews.com (Tom Faull) on 2/9/10

An intimate West End dinner with the Pet Shop Boys, a very English afternoon tea date with Victoria Wood, and the chance to design one of the famous windows at department store Liberty are among the lots on offer at the return of Terrence Higgins Trust's (THT's) Lighthouse Gala Auction. Sponsored by Prudential plc, the annual event will see an exciting range of items and experiences go under the hammer to raise funds for the HIV and sexual health charity.

When: Monday 22nd March from 6.30pm

Where: Christie's, 8 King Street, St James's, London SW1Y 6QT

This year, lots include artworks from several of the Young British Artists, with original works by Tracey Emin, Damien Hirst, and Marc Quinn up for grabs. Other artists represented at the sale include Michael Craig-Martin, Stella Vine, Jack Vettriano, and David Hockney. Luxury holidays, designer goods, a walk on part in upcoming Dusty Springfield biopic 'Dusty', and VIP tickets to a rugby match followed by dinner with Ben Cohen are just a few of the other items on offer.

I saw that mention of a walk on part in the "new" Dusty musical the other day and wondered how far along they must be with the production to feel confident of offering it up as a prize. I'm presuming they're talking about the musical that was after finance on Dragons Den but as all seems quiet on that front, I'm not sure.

You're quite right Nancy, that does say biopic. I'm sure the article I read a week or so ago said "show", which I presumed to be a stage show. A biopic being so far along would definitely be a surprise!
