Interesting to hear this version of Dusty's Something Special which preceded Dusty's own version.

This is where Dusty changed the ground rules for female solo singers, especially this side of the Atlantic. When you listen to this version and compare it with Dusty's, it's so old fashioned in the way of the 50's girl singers. Dusty's version is right in there with the girl group sound that was coming out of America, definitely a case here where the singer makes the song. Thanks Clive.

Oh wow...this is SO interesting. And I agree with Carole...it does sound a bit dated, even from the 60s. Miss Dusty's sounds timeless. I wonder, besides Madeline, have any other singers recorded any of her self-written songs?

Taylor, Françoise Hardy does a good version of Once Upon a Time in French as C'est Le Passe

You can hear it here on this show, it is at 00:51:30

Richard Anthony covered Something Special..I have it somewhere he also did Al Fronte Di amore and a n english version with different lyrics to dusty as well as covering IOWTBWY,AISYI,YDHTSYLM.

I will upload when I GET BACK TO uk ..currently nursing abroken ankle in Bansko Bulgaria wher I planned my first ski on snow only to slip on icy steps ay my apartment here on the first day so I am well plastered!!!

Oh was playing Dusty cd here and a young Bulgarian friend recognised her as someone very famous and when I said it was Dusty he knew who she was!!

Yay Graham-spreading the Dusty word in Bulgaria! Hope your ankle heals soon though, that sounds like a right awful thing to have happen on your first day of holiday.
