From Simon Bell's website:

Opening on April 17th at 10:00, Dusty features in an exhibition of portraits by photographer Peter Rand

Spotlight on Peter Rand
17 April - 16 September 2012
Room 32
Free

Dusty Springfield
by Peter Rand
27 June 1968
NPG x136006

This display celebrates the recent acquisition of a group of sixteen photographs by Vogue photographer Peter Rand, and the recent publication of The Day of the Peacock: Style for Men 1963-1973 (2011) which features many of Peter Rand's fashion photographs. Born in Dorset, Rand attended Ealing Art and Photographic College, before working as an assistant to Peter Peck at Woburn Studios (1958-9). In 1960, he joined the John French Studios, and in 1962 two of his photographs appeared on the cover of the September and December issues of British Vogue. An editorial contract with Vogue followed, and Rand remained with the magazine until 1970, photographing the leading figures of the 1960s. This display focuses on ten key works from this period which are exhibited for the first time, and includes photographs of actors Fenella Fielding, Ian Holm, Anna Massey, Sarah Miles with her brother Christopher, Corin Redgrave, Peter Wyngarde, Mike Sarne; playwright Harold Pinter with the cast of The Caretaker, singer Dusty Springfield, and entrepreneur Richard Branson. Peter Rand continues to specialize in portraiture and fashion photography.

So that's a Tuesday adventure then! I've been to the TPG several times--I think it's near Trafalger Square. There are a lot of portraits not very interesting to me, but for anyone who likes the Romantic Period of British Literature, there is the most amazing room. My party trick is to stand beneath each portrait and recite a few lines from a famous work.

The twentieth century room has some cool portraits too.

And a nice gift shop! Believe it's where I got my Queen Vicky mug. 🙌

This in the day and Pam Ann at night 😊

It looks like there's only one Dusty photo in the exhibition and to my eyes it's slightly different to the version we usually see. They often sell post cards of the pictures in an exhibition like this.

Lovely to be able to see this when you are all in London , yes it is similar to the one we know isn't it .?

A slightly larger one..

How lovely to see the enlarged version, Karen! Thanks for posting!

I hope they sell postcards, only hope they'll have enough of them cos a whole bunch will go to me! 😊

At least now we know who the photographer on that session was. Another one to add to the list.

I wonder how many other shots there are out there from that session. These two are just slightly different, are there more? I actually think the third one is the nicest.

I know the blouse isn't the same but I'm presuming the first one is from the same photographer and the second one that we know well, is also in the same style, though I'm less sure on that.

For those of you in the UK this weeks' Daily Telegraph SEVEN Magazine has a feature on the photographer Peter Rand, including Dusty's National Gallery picture. He talks about the photo session as well:

From SEVEN magazine.

'She arrived at Vogue studios at 11pm - seven hours late, effervescent, with a female assistant dressed as a man, who she sent to the Dorchester to fetch burgers. We shot until 5.30am. Most of the photographs show her screaming with laughter but this one is soulful, vulnerable. She almost cried when she saw it and said: "You've shown the other me." The photographs were used for her show at "The Talk of the Town" and she sent me tickets but I forgot to tell her I wasn't coming. She was so furious she never spoke to me again.'

Would love to see the pics with Dusty laughing!

I'm trying to remember the name of the assistant (mentioned here in the Seven article) dressed as a man.

Was it "Winchester" ? 🙄 I can't recall. I think she was mentioned in one of the bios.

Lucy O'brien's I think. 🙄 HELP !

No "Winchester" was much later, this was probably just Norma in jeans and a shirt!
