A Missing/Jumbled Part of Dusty's August Recorded Legacy Finally Set Right

DUSTY SPRINGFIELD: Faithful. CD

In 1971, Atlantic Records released a pair of Dusty Springfield singles produced by the legendary songwriter/producer Jeff Barry (one-time songwriting and romantic partner of Ellie Greenwich, and author of too many hits to name): "Haunted"/"Nothing Is Forever" and "I Believe In You"/"Someone Who Cares." A restless Dusty, freshly relocating to America from her native England, then departed the label and left an additional 9 songs recorded with Barry in the can, where they stayed until Rhino issued one track, "Faithful" (in mono), as a bonus track on the 1990s CD release of Dusty's 1970 Atlantic album A Brand New Me. The other tracks didn't surface until a subsequent deluxe reissue of Dusty's landmark 1969 album Dusty in Memphis included them as bonus cuts. Now, reissue producer Jim Pierson—who tracked down the missing masters after being lost for over two decades—has assembled all of Dusty's Barry-produced masters and put them together in a single package for the first time to create the third Dusty Springfield Atlantic Records album as planned in 1971. Real Gone Music's release of Faithful presents these historic Barry-Springfield collaborations exactly as they were originally intended to be heard, with the 12 tracks intended for the album release and one intended for single-only release. All tracks are in stereo, while the liner notes, penned by The Second Disc's Joe Marchese, feature a number of rarely-seen photos of the legendary singer. These stunning pop, soul and gospel flavored selections showcase the iconic singer at the height of her vocal magic. A missing/jumbled part of Dusty's august recorded legacy, finally set right!

SONGS:

1. I'll Be Faithful
2. Live Here With You
3. Haunted
4. Someone Who Cares
5. Make It With You
6. Love Shine Down
7. I Believe In You
8. Have A Good Life Baby
9. Natchez Trace
10. All The King's Horses
11. You've Got A Friend
12. I Found My Way Through The Darkness
13. Nothing Is Forever

Well spotted, Nancy.

Over ten years ago I compiled a CD of the thirteen Jeff Barry tracks for my own use. Interestingly, the running order chosen by Real Gone Music's compiler is totally different from mine. Not one track is in the same position. Not sure whether that says more about me or the professional compiler.

At the end of the day these are matters of personal taste, but to me Nothing Is Forever is the last track I would have chosen as the album's finale. I got round the problem by adding in the track co-produced by Ellie Greenwich, What Good Is I Love You, and making it the finale.

I had an email conversation with a lady from Universal the other day and one of the things I said was that I would like 'Longing' and 'Faithful' to be released as stand alone albums. Got one wish then 🙏 Not from Universal obviously, which is a shame as it might just have got Dusty back in the UK charts again. Mind you, which record company owns what, I never know! Jim, I agree that Nothing is Forever isn't a great end track, my choice would have been You've Got a Friend and I like your idea of including the Ellie track on your listing. It must be a CD release Pat as they talk about the package containing rarely seen photos. Could be vinyl too I guess.

Real Gone Music are one of the best re-issue labels giving ACE & BBR (Big Break Records) a run for their money. Universal seem to have lost their appetite for heritage artists like Dusty unless it's another money spinning same old soup compilation. This is what is happening to Motown recordings with ACE & BBR stepping into the breach. So I hope that if 'Faithful' sells enough Carole G may get her wish to have 'Longing' issued as a stand alone CD. Sadly neither would sell enough to chart regardless of who issues them.

John, I'll forever be the optimist where Dusty music is concerned. I know record companies annoy us with more compilations of hits but I do believe that she will be back in the charts if an album gets the right promotion in this country.

You're right there are some lost Atlantic recordings John, To Love Somebody and Sweet Charlie Babe are two, but I think the 13 tracks on this forthcoming CD are the only ones recorded with Jeff Barry.

Hi Lucy. Yes Amazon will have it, they have 41 pages of Real Gone Music CD's 😊

Hi Carole G. Real Gone are not noted for their PR, relying mainly on word of mouth from fan sites. Even Universal couldn't get Diana Ross re-issues into Billboard Top 200!

Now can anyone please tell me what the names of the tracks were that have been lost for ever? I have this info somewhere but I have no idea where!

The tracks themselves may not be new to many of us, having been available on DIM Deluxe Edition, but I hope to read interesting liner notes and see rare photos. The cover photo hints at the Langdon session, which has been discussed elsewhere here. Several photos of this session have been for sale previously, so it will be nice to see them without watermarks. 😊

I really look forward to this album!

It seems to be generally held that Atlantic erased Dusty's vocal off the master of Sweet Charlie Babe with the track then being utilized for Jackie Moore's 1973 recording. However I have seen an online post which I can't find now from someone - I suspect Bobby Eli - who stated he'd worked on the Sigma sessions for both Dusty & Jackie & that in fact a new backing track was prepped for Jackie's recording of SCB. So Dusty's SCB may be somewhere out there altho if it hasn't surfaced by now IMHO it's unlikely ever to.

I'm glad the Faithful tracks are getting a re-release. It's probably my most played Dusty album after Memphis and the first two (British) LPs. But I think 13 tracks is a bit on the skimpy side for a reissue and to leave off "What Good Is I Love You" is a mistake. It dates from the same era and fits well with the other tracks. They could have easily added the singles tracks in their mono versions as bonus tracks - I've always thought that "What Good Is I Love You" would have had an extra kick in its mono version, but I haven't heard it. If they could release all the mono single version on the 2002 Memphis reissue, why not here? Those of us who like to listen to A-/B-Sides playlists appreciate having the mono tracks for that authentic "radio" experience.

P.S. Has anybody downloaded the Mono version of "Dusty in Memphis" from HDTracks? Thoughts?

Really looking forward to this release.

Incidentally I wonder did Jim Pierson ,who located most of the tracks, try and persuade Rhino Records to release Faithful as a stand alone release back in 1999 (instead they were bonus tracks on Rhino's Dusty In Memphis deluxe edition)

This release would be even better if it included bonus tracks such as the mono and stereo versions of "What Good Is I Love You"; the mono versions of "Haunted", "I Believe in You" and "I'll Be Faithful"; and the no-backing-vocals version of "I Believe in You".

It would be amazing to have Longing issued including the unfinished "Corner of the Sky". Perhaps they could include the Petula "duet" version as a bonus cut along with any alternate vocal takes such as "I Am Your Child" (one was issued on Classics and Collectibles). If Faithful sells well then perhaps Real Gone Records can be persuaded to issue Longing as well.

I haven't, and I wonder how different the HD Stereo tracks would be from the recent SACD edition of Dusty in Memphis? I am tempted to purchase the mono edition, but at US$26.00 I would rather have a physical copy plus the three bonus cuts in mono as well if available ("Willie and Laura Mae Jones", "That Old Sweet Roll (Hi-De-Ho)" and "What Do You Do When Loves Dies").

It made me SO angry when the original 'Faithful' entry was removed from her official discography....because I wrote the ENTIRE article. Fun fact....several years ago (it would have been around 2006) when I had just started to really get into Miss Dusty's music, I checked out Wikipedia to learn more. While her own entry had some decent information, none (or very few) of her albums had any entries at all. So what did I do? Created almost all the pages for them. Granted, they've been added to and refined and polished up, but I take pride in having created the Wikipedia entries for A Girl Called Dusty; Ev'rything's Coming Up Dusty; Where Am I Going?; Faithful; Cameo; Longing; ...It Begins Again; Living Without Your Love; White Heat; Reputation and A Very Fine Love.

This album looks great. Is the quality of these tracks going to be better than what is out already with these 13 tracks. Or is something completely different. Is this indeed the original third album that Atlantic was going to release.

Also Let's Talk Dusty has really grown and become amazing.

As a ONJ fan also I can't believe what Only Olivia did to their site. It's almost demolished. They were the only great one devoted to her. Now there isn't anything out there. Except her decent official site. It's very sad. 😞

Thanks for posting Joe. 🍷 Very good piece on Dusty's Atlantic years. Some great info on all three projects. I don't agree with some of his views on A Brand New Me/From Dusty With Love but at least the author takes the time to explain why he doesn't like certain tracks on that Album individually rather than lumping them all together as all 'sounding the same' like most critics do. 🙄

I've just received notice from Amazon (who I pre-ordered the album from) that the date of release has been pushed back to late April for the U.S. Not bad news, but it is slightly irritating. I have all the tracks, but not the "official" album.

I do wonder if someone more knowledgeable than I can shed some light on the release of this album. The company releasing it, Real Gone Records is obviously NOT Atlantic Records. But is it being similarly released to how Dusty In Memphis was? Most of us know that the majority of the "Faithful" tracks were released on the deluxe version of DIM in 1999, but under the Rhino label. Is Real Gone a compilation/reissue label like Rhino? I wonder why it's being released this way, rather than via Universal, who (I believe) own the masters to all of Dusty's music with the exception of the Atlantic recordings.

Top

Re: New Release - Faithful - from Real Gone Records (#p169322)

by smallworld » Tue Mar 31, 2015 1:31 pm

Real Gone is indeed a reissue label. I imagine it's simply a case that Universal had no interest in releasing the tracks as a standalone album. There are no hit singles to entice the casual buyer. Its appeal is likely considered "niche". And of course, the tracks are already available elsewhere.

Speaking of (un)availability, I've already mentioned my disappointment that there are no bonus tracks unique to this issue, which is very surprising as that's usually a standard way to make a reissue appealing to fans who otherwise wouldn't part with their money for tracks they already own. This is even more perplexing when the likes of the US single mix of "What Good Is I Love You" still haven't appeared on CD. If they can use a vinyl source for the CD debut of the mono mix of "I Can't Wait to See My Baby's Face", why not do the same for the post Memphis Atlantic singles?

Thanks for the link. With all the myriad compilations, it's surprising that track has never surfaced on CD.

I do wonder if someone more knowledgeable than I can shed some light on the release of this album. The company releasing it, Real Gone Records is obviously NOT Atlantic Records. But is it being similarly released to how Dusty In Memphis was? Most of us know that the majority of the "Faithful" tracks were released on the deluxe version of DIM in 1999, but under the Rhino label. Is Real Gone a compilation/reissue label like Rhino? I wonder why it's being released this way, rather than via Universal, who (I believe) own the masters to all of Dusty's music with the exception of the Atlantic recordings.

I got the same notice, Taylor. But mostly this post is to say nice to see you on LTD.

I don't want to burst your balloon, Pat, but, as two US members have pointed out above, the US release date has been put back to 28 April according to Amazon US. While Amazon UK is still showing 13 April as the release date, I think that it is very likely that it will be released here over a fortnight before the US release. I guess that Amazon UK just hasn't updated its site.

Sorry.

Just received an e-mail from Amazon UK to say release date has been 'unexpectedly delayed' until 24th - 27th April.....par for the course on any Dusty release

I'd like to think they have been overwhelmed with orders and have got to press thousands more 🙄

Despite the e-mail Brian has received, Amazon UK's website was still showing the release date as 13 April as of 1047 BST today. However a note has been added to the effect that dispatch will take place 'within 10 to 13 days.' I haven't received any e-mail from Amazon UK yet.

E-mail today (14 April) advised new delivery date 25-27 April! Wouldn't it be great if the real reason for delay is huge requests and RGR are having problems fulfilling orders. Another hit for Dusty ?.

From 'American Songwriter'

Dusty Springfield

Faithful

(Real Gone)

3.5 out of 5 stars

Had these songs been released in late 1971, when they were originally scheduled, the dozen tracks would have been Dusty Springfield's third Atlantic album. Coming on the heels of 1969's successful Dusty in Memphis and 1970's A Brand New Me, the songwriter/producer Jeff Barry helmed tracks would have made for a pretty great trilogy. But that never happened.

Springfield decamped for ABC Dunhill leaving these songs in the vaults where they were thought to have vanished or even burned in a fire. Rhino released four on their expanded edition of Dusty In Memphis, but the rest stayed hidden away...until now. Reissue label Real Gone found the missing tunes and sequenced them along with an extra single to recreate the missing album, named after the key word in its opening tune "I'll Be Faithful."

While there is no "Son of a Preacher Man" here, a few tracks such as the funky "Haunted" and the surprisingly raw and rocking "Natchez Trace" come pretty close. Faithful follows the ...Memphis blueprint of recording a Southern soul set in New York City, only without a band that captured a swampy groove as effectively. The musician credits are frustratingly MIA (perhaps they were also misplaced), but the group does an admirable job of laying down these songs and allowing plenty of room for Dusty to take control.

The singer was arguably at the peak of her talents during these sessions. Here she smothers her husky pipes over the gospel pop of "I Found My Way Through the Darkness" and the more laid back, but no less heartfelt, Bread cover "Make it With You" complete with orchestration. Perhaps the Burt Bacharach-styled dynamic ballad "Love Shine Down" and Barry's passionate "I Believe in You" would even have been hits if given a chance when they were recorded almost 45 years ago.

We'll never know but it's a treat to have this music that few fans even knew existed, available. Real Gone packages it professionally with informative liner notes that fill in some missing pieces of the story and classy photos from the era. The audio is clean and well mastered. Dusty is in terrific voice and spirits making this something of a lost, and now found, classic.

I would like to see this CD advertised so that the general public knows about it and not just "fans".

With the Musical coming up and again with the right advertising Dusty could be in the charts again and be the talk of the theatre world.

They both need selling to the public it's the least she deserves.

I wonder if that reviewer is ill-informed or telling porkies. All the tracks have been released before. And I believe "I Believe in You" was released a single, rather than being a missed opportunity. If I had to pick a "hit" from the album, I'd go for "Love Shine Down" or "I'll Be Faithful". "I Believe in You" screams album track/b-side.

I'm interested to hear about the liner notes. The popculturecantina blog did such a good job with their coverage (they also do a similar job on Lesley Gore's Mercury sides).

Yes, several of the tracks have been on other albums, but it's nice to have them together, and some are new to me. The photos are of the era. Harry Langdon's shoot in LA in 70. It is a shame that Jeff Barry did not do the notes.

Overall to me it is a great collection.

My copy arrived today.

All of the tracks have been released before on CD in the US, some in 1992 on the Rhino CD A Brand New Me and the rest in 1999 on the Rhino CD Dusty In Memphis. I have not read the liner notes yet, but the photographs are nothing to write home about. Basically, they come from the same session as the cover photo.

It is a shame that Jeff Barry did not do the notes.

Indeed. I'd also like to know how he would have sequenced the album - if he (and Dusty) didn't already do so before her relationship with Atlantic completely soured.

As for the project getting more mainstream attention. I could see "You've Got a Friend" helping out if used on TV - maybe in an advert a la "Piece of My Heart". I suppose that sort of thing would have to have been worked out months in advance of the release - though I think "Piece of My Heart" and the similarly named collection was a happy co-incidence rather than a tie-in.

Delighted to have it but seems very unfair that USA fans still have to wait.

I'm hearing instrumentation I never noticed before on some tracks, maybe due to remastering, I must go back and listen to earlier releases to see if I am imagining this!

Nice to see promotion of Looking Good Isn't Always Easy book in the booklet.

Also looking at the songwriter credits , an additional songwriter Joseph Renzetti is now listed as co-writer of All The King's Horses

As I have only really become obsessed with Dusty and her music over the past six months, albums such as this are listened to by me with amazement and adoration.

Her vocal range is astonishing and the quality and tone of her voice is sublime.

Although I have heard several of the songs previously, it's wonderful to hear them in the sequence they are set out on this album. Most of the tracks are new to me, so this album is an essential addition to my Dusty education.

One thing is for sure - now that I have discovered the fabulous Dusty, she will remain part of my life always
